Jessica Meyers is a 2009 graduate of the Master of Public Administration Program at SLU. She also holds a Bachelor's Degree from SLU in Criminal Justice.

Jessica is the Director of Advocacy Services for Crime Victim Advocacy Center, a nonprofit that serves victims of crime and violence in the St. Louis Area. As part of her position, she works directly with victims and their families, primarily homicide victims' families. She is also responsible for creating and administering community and law enforcement training, testifying at state and local hearings on bills affecting crime victims, and other public advocacy work.

Jessica is a board member of the St. Louis Anti-Violence Project, a project to reduce the impact of relational violence in the LGBTQ community and members of many taskforces including the St. Louis Family Violence Council, Attorney General's Hate Crimes Taskforce, and the Homicide, Ministers & Community Alliance. She is currently enrolled in the Doctoral Program in Public and Social Policy at SLU with a research emphasis on hate and bias crimes.
