Course description and objectives:

Welcome! This course is designed to introduce students to the political, theoretical, and ethical debates concerning social movements in Latin America. In a region characterized by extreme inequalities based on wealth, class, race, sex, language, sexual orientation, nationality, and region (among others), organized collective action (aka, social movements) are a powerful tool for marginalized and excluded groups to make their voices heard.

We should not delude ourselves, however. Oftentimes the concrete gains these movements achieve are quite small and they have frequently confronted violent repression at the hands of the state and dominant groups. In part, this course will force us to consider what social movements are, what they do, and what we can reasonably expect them to achieve. For example, are women’s groups that mobilize to demand greater access to education, medical care, or legal rights considered a failure when these demands are not met? Or is the act of organizing and making demands an achievement in itself?

The course begins with a theoretical introduction where we will consider what social movements are, where they come from, why they emerge in some contexts and not others, how they mobilize and make demands, and how other political actors respond to them. We will spend the rest of the semester examining a variety of different social movements in Latin America including those concerned with indigenous rights, women’s rights and gender equality, LGBT issues, labor and economic rights, and the environment.

Throughout the semester students will use the theoretical and empirical tools we develop in the class to write a research paper which they will present to the class on December 4th and 6th. These papers can be theoretical essays, case studies, or (with my approval) other creative projects which the student designs.
Required texts:

All required texts are available for purchase at the Saint Louis University Bookstore in the Busch Student Center. They can also be readily located at the various online booksellers (often at lower prices). Readings that are not in any of the assigned books will be sent to the class via email during the first week of the semester.

The required books for the course are:

NOTE: It is important that you have the correct addition. There are two new chapters that are not in previous editions.

Course requirements and grading:

Mid-term exam (25% of final grade):
The mid-term exam will occur fairly early in the semester (October 9th) and will be mostly theoretical in nature. It will be in essay format.

5 Journal Entries (5% each = 25% of final grade):
Each student will submit FIVE personal journal entries over the course of the semester. Each journal should be approximately one page (and no more than two pages) in length. In these journals you can reflect on any topic relevant to the course, but I'd like you to discuss and reflect on the readings that are relevant to that topic. These can be informal in nature (no need for titles, citations, etc.). Students will turn in a hard copy of their journal in class. So that you don’t wait until the end of the semester to write all five journals, you must turn in at least two journals by November 1st.

Research paper: 40% of final grade:
All students will complete a formal research paper on a topic of their own choosing. Students should consult with the professor early in the semester (and no later than October 17th) to ensure that they have selected an acceptable topic. A 2-page introduction and preliminary bibliography (5% of grade) is due on November 13th. Final papers (25% of grade) should be approximately 20 pages in length and are due by December 18th by 2:00pm (e-mail submissions are NOT acceptable). 10% of the grade for the research paper will be based on students’ in-class presentation of their research paper at the end of the semester (December 4th and 6th), so papers should be far enough along by that point that students can present their ideas to the class.

Class participation: 10% of final grade
Your attendance and active participation are vital to the success of this course. Different students participate in different ways. At a minimum, students should come to class on time having read and thought about the assigned readings for that class. I expect that all students will make a contribution to class discussions through comments, questions, criticisms, and analysis of the assigned readings. In assigning grades, quality of participation will take precedence over quantity of participation (hence, the student who participates frequently but without giving much thought to their comments/questions is not at an advantage compared to the student who offers occasional but insightful analysis and questions).

Final letter grades will be assigned that correspond to the following numeric scale:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Grade</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>93-100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A-</td>
<td>90-92</td>

Attendance and participation:

I do not consider class time to be a time simply to review the assigned readings. We will cover materials during class that are not in the readings (and we will not cover every single point from the readings in class). Class attendance is, therefore, imperative. If you must miss class for an approved reason (e.g.; illness, death or medical emergency in the immediate family, University--sponsored activities), please let me know via email as soon as possible. You are responsible for all materials covered in class, whether you are physically present or not. Make-up exams will be given only under the most extraordinary of circumstances. Late papers will be penalized 5 points per day.

Classroom courtesy:

Out of respect for all of those in class, all cell phones, pagers, and any other noisemaking devices must be turned OFF during the entire class period and during exams. Laptop computers may be used in class provided they do not make noise that disturbs those around you. I reserve the right to ask you to turn off and put away your computer if it is creating a disruption.

Students with disabilities:

In recognition that people learn in a variety of ways and that learning is influenced by multiple factors (e.g., prior experience, study skills, learning disability), resources to support student success are available on campus. Students who think they might benefit from these resources can find out more about:

- Course-level support (e.g., faculty member, departmental resources, etc.) by asking your course instructor.
- University-level support (e.g., tutoring/writing services, Disability Services) by visiting the Student Success Center (BSC 331) or by going to www.slu.edu/success.
Students who believe that, due to a disability, they could benefit from academic accommodations are encouraged to contact Disability Services at 314-977-8885 or visit the Student Success Center. Confidentiality will be observed in all inquiries. Course instructors support student accommodation requests when an approved letter from Disability Services has been received and when students discuss these accommodations with the instructor after receipt of the approved letter.

Academic integrity:

The University is a community of learning, whose effectiveness requires an environment of mutual trust and integrity. Academic integrity is violated by any dishonesty such as soliciting, receiving, or providing any unauthorized assistance in the completion of work submitted toward academic credit. While not all forms of academic dishonesty can be listed here, examples include copying from another student, copying from a book or class notes during a closed book exam, submitting materials authored by or revised by another person as the student’s own work, copying a passage or text directly from a published source without appropriately citing or recognizing that source, taking a test or doing an assignment or other academic work for another student, securing or supplying in advance a copy of an examination or quiz without the knowledge or consent of the instructor, sharing or receiving the questions from an on-line quiz with another student, taking an on-line quiz with the help of another student, and colluding with another student or students to engage in academic dishonesty.

All clear violations of academic integrity will be met with appropriate sanctions. In this course, academic dishonesty on an assignment will result in an automatic grade of 0 for that assignment and a report of academic dishonesty sent to the Academic Honesty Committee of the College of Arts and Sciences. In the case of Class B violations, the Academic Honesty Committee may impose a larger sanction including, but not limited to, assigning a failing grade in the course, disciplinary probation, suspension, and dismissal from the University.

Students should refer to the following SLU website for more information about Class A and B violations and the procedures following a report of academic dishonesty:
