“We tend to assume that pacifism is radical and the Just War Tradition is mainstream, but the authors of this volume make clear that the Just War Tradition would have radical consequences if it were taken seriously. These essays bring the tradition up to date, not by stretching it to make it justify new tactics and technologies, but by subjecting the horrors of modern war to strict moral scrutiny, and thereby enhancing our ability to say ‘no’ to violence when conscience demands it. Thinking about war with integrity requires the kind of moral seriousness exhibited in this volume.”

—William T. Cavanaugh, DePaul University

“An outstanding collection of essays on the relevance of the just war tradition to contemporary warfare. This book is a must-read—not only for Christian ethicists, but for any citizens concerned about the morality of war as it is fought today and will be fought in the future.”

—Stephen J. Pope, Boston College

“...an impressive illustration of the vigor and moral concern with which upcoming scholars address extremely difficult problems while working within a common theological tradition.”

—John Langan, S.J., Georgetown University

Tobias Winright holds the Hubert Mader Chair in the Albert Gnaegi Center for Health Care Ethics and is associate professor in the department of theological studies at Saint Louis University. He is co-editor of the Journal of the Society of Christian Ethics and co-author of After the Smoke Clears (Orbis 2010).

Laurie Johnston is assistant professor of theology and director of fellowships at Emmanuel College in Boston. She serves on the Steering Committee of the Catholic Peacebuilding Network and is a member of the Community of Sant’Egidio. She has published numerous articles on topics related to just war, peacebuilding, and the theology of Yves Congar.