What do a consecrated virgin, a married couple, a Catholic author and a few medical professionals have in common? They realize that God created the sexual act between persons to be an inseparable invitation for a woman and a man to grow more closely in love, and a closeness always ordered to the possibility of new life. Come and learn why artificial hormones and chemical contraceptives are not only bad for your body, but just might harm your soul as well!

Dr Cara Buskmiller, a consecrated virgin, is an obstetrics and gynecology resident physician at Saint Louis University. She is a graduate of Thomas Aquinas College and the Texas Health Science Center College of Medicine.

Emma Harty and Troy Woytek have been married for eight years and are proud parents of three children. Troy is a campus minister at Washington University in St Louis and Emma practices law.

Michelle and Andrew Chronister are married and have two girls. Michelle is a Catholic blogger and author and Andrew completed his PhD in Theology at Saint Louis University.

Dr Teresa Hilgers is a fourth year obstetrics and gynecology resident at Mercy Hospital in St Louis, Missouri. She will start a fellowship in NaProTECHNOLOGY this fall.

Annual NFP Night is co-sponsored by the Edmund Campion Centre for Catholic Studies at Saint Louis University and the Catholic Student Center at Washington University in St Louis.
