Saint Louis University, a Jesuit, catholic university, founded in 1818 is undertaking the process of institutional self-examination and reflection in preparation for the visit of the North Central Association review team in April, 2002. This self-study process will involve all programs and administrative units of the University and will intersect with on-going quality assessment and improvement efforts such as institutional planning, SLU2000, and the capital campaign.

Mission Statement of the NCA Self-Study Steering Committee

“To lead Saint Louis University through a comprehensive self-study process in a productive and meaningful manner to achieve reaccreditation from the North Central Association with the ultimate purpose of continuous improvement of the entire university community, and especially the educational experience of SLU students.”

Purposes of Institutional Self-Study

Examine institutional activities in view of the mission statement of the University
Examine and describe the educational programs, support services, and facilities of the University: its human, financial, and physical resources; and its administration, governance, and planning structure
Analyze and evaluate the educational programs, support services, and facilities of the University; its human, financial, and physical resources; and its administration, governance, and planning structure with respect to the University’s mission
Integrate the ongoing planning and institutional enhancement processes with the Self-Study
Identify evaluative instruments and departmental reports that would institutionalize the Self-Study process, thereby making it a part of the ongoing operation of the University.
Review and document major institutional changes which have taken place since the last Self-Study
Achieve continuing accreditation from the North Central Association

Outline of the Self-Study Report

The Steering Committee believes that the basic criteria provide a logical structure for the self-study. Although some reorganization may occur as the report is prepared and edited, the following is an outline of a report that would follow this approach. In conducting the self-study and preparing the report, the Committee will focus on the theme, “A Decade of Renaissance.”

Introduction and Overview

This section will present the following: a description of Saint Louis University and its community; current NCA accreditation status along with a history of accreditation at the University; responses to the recommendations made by the 1992 NCA visitors as well as other significant changes that have occurred in the last decade; a description of the purposes and organization of the self-study report and appendices; a description of the self-study process.

General Institutional Requirements
This section will describe the “threshold” requirements as part of the general institutional requirements (GIRs). Information is provided on the University mission statement, authorization, governance, faculty, educational programs and associated policies, finances and related requirements of operation. Detailed documentation will be available in one or more appendices.
The institution has clear and publicly stated purposes consistent with its mission and appropriate to an institution of higher education.

The President’s vision and University mission will be presented along with a description of how the units within the University contribute to the realization of the institution’s mission. The section will begin with a description of the statement of mission and will examine the forces that bring meaning to the mission: e.g., core curriculum, perceptions of members of the University community, major programmatic initiatives. Comments about strengths and opportunities to improve will be included.

The institution has effectively organized the human, financial, and physical resources necessary to accomplish its purposes.

This section will contain a detailed evaluative examination of the resources the University has to use in fulfilling its mission. An outline of areas to be addressed follows:

Organization and Governance
  Board of Trustees
  Administration
  Internal Committees
  Strengths
  Opportunities for Improvement

Human Resources
  Faculty:
    Faculty Profile
    Faculty Orientation
    Credentials
    Evaluations
    Academic Freedom and Responsibility
    Professional Growth and Development
    Recognition and Awards
  Staff:
    Recruiting and Hiring
    EEO/AA
    Evaluations
    Goal-Setting
    Staff Recognition and Awards
    Stability of Employees
  Strengths
  Opportunities for Improvement

Financial Resources
  Introduction
  Financial Audits
The institution is accomplishing its educational and other purposes.

This section will provide an evaluative description of the University’s application of resources in meeting its mission. Initially it will describe the educational purposes and philosophy of the University, the degree and certificate programs offered by the University, any curriculum revisions since the last self-study, along with strengths and opportunities for improvement. It will also address the institutional assessment plan. The faculty dimension of this topic will address such topics as faculty performance in quality of instruction, research, and service, faculty professional development, and general contributions to institutional effectiveness. The quality of the experiences of students is affected by a number of areas of the University. The self-study process will examine the following: academic and student services, academic advising and assistance, admissions counseling, registration, career services, financial aid, residence life, new student orientation, personal counseling, campus ministry, registrar, student activities, bookstore, food services, security. Also included in this section is a description of quality of entering students, retention/graduation rates/cohort rate, and post-graduation placement. For all areas considered, strengths and opportunities for improvement will be noted.

The institution can continue to accomplish its purposes and strengthen its educational effectiveness.

This section will address strategic planning and strategic initiatives across the institution. Evidence of the University’s capacity to plan, to implement a plan and to revise the plan to maintain the University’s forward movement will be presented. Positioning for the future, including the financial picture will be addressed here. Strengths and opportunities for improvement will be noted.

The institution demonstrates integrity in its practices and relationships.

The following represents the content of this section:
- Hiring practices, policies, and procedures.
- Employee gender and ethnic diversity.
