Welcome to St. Louis!

It's not just that St. Louis boasts the kind of cultural treasures you'd expect to see only in the very biggest American cities. It's not just that it boasts terrific recreational opportunities, from major league sports teams to spectacular parks and golf courses to beautiful hiking and canoeing nearby.

It's that you can do these things in St. Louis. It's that nothing is out of reach - in price, in location, in the size of the crowd trying to get in.

A community with a remarkably low cost of living for all of the comforts and attractions it affords, St. Louis is a big city with the convenience and sense of connectedness of a smaller one.

Visiting the city's nationally acclaimed Zoo will cost you...nothing (thanks to the taxpayers and philanthropists). The Art Museum, the History Museum, the Science Center will cost you...nothing. The charges for the Symphony and the Missouri Botanical Garden are all very reasonable.

Not only is the price right - you can get there. St. Louis is a "20-minute city," where most of the attractions are within a reasonable distance from most of the people. Across most of the region, average commutes to work are below the national average of 24.7 minutes.

Availability, accessibility - these are characteristics of the region in general. St. Louis is open, in the broadest sense of the word. Whatever role you want to play here - in civic affairs or any other aspect of life - you'll get a friendly, appreciative welcome.

Overall, St. Louis has a sanity about it that's increasingly difficult to find. A balance and degree of comfort that are absolutely exceptional among cities that also offer the kind of world-class assets this community features. And a sense of community, a connectedness among its people, that arises from its Midwestern personality, manageable scale, and deep history.

For companies and their employees, that's a winning combination.

Attractions

With so much history and diversity tied into its culture, the St. Louis area offers entertaining attractions that cater to everyone, regardless of age or taste. Whether your interests lie in architecture, music, history, botany, food, or nightlife, you’re bound to find your niche in St. Louis.

Six hundred and thirty feet tall, the Gateway Arch is both a tribute to Thomas Jefferson and a monument to westward expansion. An elevator ride to the top affords a spectacular view of the St. Louis metropolitan area and is a great way to catch a first glimpse of this remarkable city.

A (free!) tour of the Anheuser-Busch InBev brewery provides an exciting behind-the-scenes look at how the local beer producer creates the products that make it the biggest and best brewery in the world. And just up the street is the historic Soulard Market, an open-air farmers' market that since 1838 has provided area residents with the freshest locally grown fruits and vegetables.

The Missouri Botanical Garden, one of the world’s leading botanical research facilities, features not only species of plants native to the St. Louis region, but also Japanese, English and Chinese gardens and an exotic array of flowers, shrubs and trees.

The world's largest collection of mosaics, which took three generations and 20 different artists to complete, can be found at the St. Louis Cathedral Basilica, an awe-inspiring Romanesque and Byzantine-style Roman Catholic church, whose construction began in 1907.

Just across the river from downtown St. Louis, Cahokia Mounds State Historic Site is a U.S. National Historic Landmark that houses remains of the most sophisticated prehistoric civilization north of Mexico. Inhabited from 700 to 1400 A.D., the site may have been home to 20,000 people at its peak.

Climate

The climate of the St. Louis area is like the character of the region: balanced: St. Louis enjoys the advantages of four full seasons with few extremes.

- Spring arrives generally in mid-March.
- Fall is equal to anything to be found in New England, but longer—sometimes extending even into November.
- Summers are warm and sometimes hot and humid, but usually without long spells of excessive temperatures, and on a par with many mid latitude communities.
- Winters are relatively short and mild, with cold spells always interrupted by milder temperatures and just enough snowfalls to satisfy children and romantics.

Average monthly temperatures range from 33.8° in January to 800° in July, with a normal January low of 21.2° and a normal July high of 899°.

St. Louis has between 35-40 days each year with temperatures above 90° and less than 25 days with temperatures below 32°. The 100-year annual average of precipitation* is 37.4 inches and of snowfall is 18.5 inches (1908-2008).

Cost of Living

Greater St. Louis has a very affordable cost of living, below the U.S. metro average and very low for a metro area of its size. The Cost Of Living Index (COLI) Calculator allows for comparison of the cost of living in Greater St. Louis to almost any of the other metro area in the country. Simply enter a base salary for any other metro and the calculator will determine how much you’d need to earn for a comparable standard of living in Greater St. Louis. It will also produce a detailed report with the dollar costs of groceries, utilities, housing, transportation, health care, and other miscellaneous expenses in any metro, Greater St. Louis, and the U.S. average.

Cultural Events

Greater St. Louis is a region whose artistic events and attractions regularly impress even its most cultured residents. Numerous venues for theatrical, musical, dance and other artistic performances abound, driving many of the world's most talented artists - including those who call St. Louis home - here.

At the doorstep of St. Louis University is Grand Center, the arts and entertainment district. Grand Center is home to the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra, Powell Symphony Hall, Sheldon Concert Hall, St. Louis Black Repertory Theatre, and Dance St. Louis. The district also features jazz clubs and several great restaurants.

The nationally acclaimed Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra, which performs at Powell Symphony Hall, is currently in its 131st season. Founded in 1880, the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra is the second-oldest orchestra in the country and widely considered one of the world's finest. The orchestra has been honored with a total of six Grammies and 56 nominations, and it has toured Europe, the Far East and beyond. Led by David Robertson since 2005, the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra continues to attract national attention. The New York Times praised the music director citing that "St. Louis audiences are streaming into his concerts, and the orchestra sounded terrific during the typically invigorating Robertson program ..." in the article "Passing the Baton: Be Bold, New York" on April 15, 2007.

In addition, several exciting venues, including Powell Symphony Hall and the acoustically superb Sheldon Concert Hall, regularly feature world-famous musicians. And dozens of other theaters and clubs keep St. Louis moving to a beat all its own every night of the week.

The St. Louis Black Repertory Theatre, the largest African American cultural performing arts organization in Missouri, performs in the heart of Grand Center, St. Louis' arts and entertainment district. The troupe produces six productions each season by both established and emerging playwrights.

In addition to the Black Rep and Powell Hall, Grand Center is also home to Dance St. Louis - which brings to the region national and international professional dance companies from American Ballet Theater to STOMP. Grand Center is also the site of the - which for more than 75 years has attracted the world's most popular Broadway musicals and musical performers.

Broadway performances can also be seen at the Muny, the country's oldest and largest outdoor musical theater, in beautiful Forest Park. In addition to 12,000 reserved seats, the Muny has almost 1,500 free seats available to the public each night.

The Opera Theatre of Saint Louis, one of the country's premier opera companies, has been offering innovative performances of standard and unusual repertory for more than 20 years, and presents a spring festival with four rotating productions every May and June.

And of course, St Louis is one of the best places in the world to hear the blues, with live performances every night of the week in dozens of clubs throughout the Soulard neighborhood and elsewhere in the area.

Grocery Stores

The following is a list of notable grocery chains in the St. Louis area.

Schnuck's: Your standard community grocery store; the stores are well lit, clean, and huge.

Dierberg's: Schnuck's biggest competitor, slightly more upscale.

Straub's: They have been in the grocery business since 1901. Prices are high but quality is excellent and the small specialty markets are good if you are looking for a hard to find food item.

Trader Joe's: A privately held chain specializing in gourmet, vegetarian, and organic foods. Prices are slightly higher than your neighborhood grocer.

Whole Foods Market: The world's largest retailer of natural and organic foods. Prices are higher but so is the quality.
Museums

Ever since the legendary 1904 World's Fair, St. Louis has been a top choice for artists from around the world to showcase their works. The following are just a few of St. Louis's more than 20 museums.

Housed in the magnificent Beaux Arts-style Palace of Fine Arts Building, which was created for the 1904 Fair, the Saint Louis Art Museum is among the top 10 U.S. museums in annual attendance. Favorites among the 30,000 works in the free museum's collection are a 3000-year-old mummy, several recreated period rooms, suits of armor, Renaissance masterpieces and Impressionist paintings.

The Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis is one of the leading voices in the world of contemporary art. The Contemporary is dedicated to exhibiting the visual arts and artists of our time and to producing nationally recognized education programs. A non-collecting institution, the Contemporary focuses its efforts on six to eight exhibitions a year, featuring local, national and international, well-known and 'newly established' artists from diverse backgrounds. In 2003, the Contemporary moved into new permanent space in midtown St. Louis, an area known as the Grand Center Creative and Cultural District.

The Missouri History Museum, which was built with proceeds from the 1904 Fair in memory of Thomas Jefferson, houses a variety of exhibits and educational resources focusing on the St. Louis region, the State of Missouri and the American West.

The fourth-most-visited science center in the nation, the Saint Louis Science Center features several exhibits that encourage an understanding of ecology, environment, humanity, technology and space. Popular attractions include a planetarium theater, an aviation gallery, an info machines gallery, a structures gallery where visitors can rebuild the Gateway Arch and a 700-foot glass-enclosed bridge over Interstate 64 with inset glass floor panels and radar guns to clock oncoming traffic.

Recently named one of the "World's to Best Public Spaces" by New York-based Project for Public Spaces, the St. Louis City Museum stretches the definition of museum to new and exhilarating dimensions. Built by a team of wildly creative designers and artists, the museum includes three floors of surprising and diverse experiences, including a multi-level enchanted forest, a giant aquarium, an architectural museum, a participatory circus, museums of oddities and more. The museum draws more than 600,000 visitors annually, making it one of the area's most popular attractions.

With more than 100 exhibits offering hands-on fun for kids ages 1 to 100, the Magic House-St. Louis Children's Museum was ranked by Family Magazine 2004 as the No. 1 most appealing attraction for children in the United States - beating out even Disneyland and Disney's Magic Kingdom.
Neighborhoods and Communities

The city of St. Louis is framed by over 90 towns and municipalities. This is a selective list of growing communities, each with something unique to offer.

St. Louis City

Lafayette Square: listed on the National Register of Historic Places and brimming with Victorian architecture, bordering a stately city park filled with huge old trees.

Soula:rd: home of the one the oldest open air markets in America, where red brick is found in row houses, sidewalks, and some streets and where Mardi Gras is celebrated with abandon.

The Shaw Neighborhood: a mixture of 1900 middle-class prosperity and two-family flats, which is being revitalized by the energies and attention of nearby Missouri Botanical Gardens.

St. Louis Hills: a planned community of stylish brick homes that encompass lovely Francis Park.

The Central West End: an area of popular restaurants, galleries, and many grand townhomes. With an air of sophisticated, understated, and sometimes worn elegance.

The Washington Lofts: in downtown St. Louis, featuring lofts in every stage of construction, some with spectacular lobbies, some with wonderful views, all within moments of professional sports venues.

The Suburbs

Clayton: claims elegant and exclusive subdivisions, booming condominium developments, law offices, financial services, praiseworthy public schools, apartments, and gracious, tree lined neighborhoods.

Maplewood: an inner suburb of charming Victorian frame homes flourished through the 1940s and has been recently rediscovered for its charming and relatively inexpensive housing stock.

University City: noted for its cultural diversity, liberal outlook, and international flair. Block after block of traditionally styled brick homes are the norm, but apartments and condominiums are numerous as well.

Ladue and Huntleigh: Recognized for stately homes and spacious lots (much of the residential area is zoned for a minimum 3 acres), these communities are generally considered the most prestigious in the metropolitan area.

Brentwood and Richmond Heights: these older, well-established communities offer convenient location with a comfortable small town atmosphere. Residents have ready access to an enormous concentration of quality retail shopping.

Webster Groves: Its handsome frame homes interspersed with a multitude of churches remind many of New England.

Glendale: a small, attractive community of mid-size, appealing homes that vary from one another in style, construction, and finish. Relying on nearby towns for public schools and major shopping, Glendale is truly a bedroom community.

Kirkwood: one of the most comfortable family communities in the metropolitan area. It takes particular pride in its good schools, city services, and retail shopping.

Des Peres: a well planned residential community that features many larger traditional homes on generous lots. Because of its central location and easy access to virtually all major highways, it offers convenient commuting to most of the metro area.

Beyond 1-270

Ballwin and Manchester: Today these active communities provide an array of recreational opportunities for their citizens in the form of parks, golf courses, and baseball complexes.

Chesterfield: the area's natural beauty and its proximity to a major highway attracted significant housing, commercial development, and a regional shopping mall that made it the affluent mecca of multitudes.

Wildwood: its specific mission is to preserve as much of its natural beauty as possible by limiting growth. Relying on absolute zoning restrictions, this community intends to enjoy its vistas of farmland, rolling hills, deep woods, and meandering streams in perpetuity.
Neighborhoods and Communities

Beyond St. Louis County

St. Charles County: one of the fastest growing counties in America. Host of the Lewis and Clark Expedition in 1804 and Missouri’s first capitol (1821), the county features the cities of St. Charles, St. Peters, and O’Fallon.

Belleville, IL: a rich blend of America’s finest traditions, from classic brick homes on graceful tree-lined streets to the contemporary "can-do" attitude of a progressive business and industrial sector.

Collinsville, IL: known for its progressive attitude, preferred location, great real estate market and significant new growth.

Parks

With beautiful Forest Park as its centerpiece, the St. Louis area is widely recognized as one of the greenest regions in the country.

The showcase of the 1904 World's Fair, Forest Park today is one of the nation's largest metropolitan parks, covering almost 1,300 acres, more than 500 acres larger than New York's Central Park, that houses some of St. Louis' premier attractions, including the Saint Louis Zoo, the Saint Louis Art Museum, the Missouri History Museum, the Saint Louis Science Center, the Jewel Box, the Muny, two golf courses, tennis courts, a six-mile running trail, dozens of ball fields, and much more. Perhaps the best part is that all of these are completely free.

Tower Grove Park in South St. Louis is the finest example of a Victorian Park remaining in the United States. It has been designated a National Historic Landmark—one of only six municipal parks to achieve that status—and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Henry Shaw, founder of the Missouri Botanical Garden, gave the 289-acre park to the city in 1868. Shaw designed and personally oversaw the park's development, including the planting of more than 8,000 trees and shrubs he imported from around the world.

There are more than 100 park areas in the city, and the crown jewel of downtown is the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, which consists of the Gateway Arch, the Museum of Westward Expansion, and St. Louis' Old Courthouse. Every year, these downtown attractions play host to Fair Saint Louis, the largest free three-day Fourth of July celebration in the United States.

Funded by a one-tenth cent sales tax approved in 2001 by voters in the City of St. Louis, St. Louis County and St. Charles County, the Great Rivers Greenway District is developing The River Ring, an interconnected system of greenways, parks and trails that will encircle the St. Louis region. The River Ring will eventually be a 600-mile web of more than 45 greenways that will crisscross the region and provide access to trail and greenway projects developed separately by the Metro East Park and Recreation District in Madison and St. Clair counties in Illinois.

In addition, the Greater St. Louis area is surrounded by a wealth of state parks in both Illinois and Missouri. These resources offer numerous activities—including camping, hiking, fishing, canoeing, kayaking, spelunking, swimming, picnicking, and equestrian and bicycle riding—in beautiful destinations that are all just a short road trip away.

Professional Sports

We're No. 1 and proud of it! St. Louis is a recognized world class sport city with The Sporting News naming it the nation's "Best Sports City" in 2000 and the "Best Baseball City" in 2005. We're home to the St. Louis Blues and St. Louis Cardinals, professional sports franchises, along with many other popular teams. These include the Saint Louis University Billikens and the Gateway Grizzlies (minor league baseball).

In addition to having popular professional sports teams, St. Louis also has happy fans. The St. Louis Blues and the St. Louis Cardinals ranked high in fan satisfaction for 2009 (No. 10 and No. 26 respectively) on ESPN The Magazine's seventh annual Ultimate Standings survey, which ranked fan satisfaction among 122 MLB, NBA, NFL and NHL franchises based on fan feedback on eight major categories: bang for the buck, fan relations, team ownership, affordability, stadium experience, players, coaches, and title track.

St. Louis is home to great athletic venues, most notably:

- Busch Stadium, a retro-style ballpark, opened in 2006 just in time to host the Cardinals' World Series victory that same year. It also hosted the 80th MLB All-Star Game on July 14, 2009. At a press conference surrounding the All-Star events, Commissioner Bud Selig said, "[St. Louis] is a remarkable baseball town. The Commissioner is always supposed to be neutral, but there are some great baseball cities; there is no city with a greater history, tradition and presence than St. Louis."
- The Blues compete in the Scottrade Center, a 19,000 seat arena. The Scottrade Center also hosts numerous other events, including professional wrestling and concerts.
- St. Louis University’s new Chaifetz Arena opened in March 2008. It seats just over 10,000 for SLU Billikens NCAA Division I basketball and also hosts concerts and other events.

Do-it-Yourself Moving

This service is offered by United Van Lines, and is a cost-effective way to cut down on moving costs. Essentially, the employee rents a storage unit from United. United drops off the unit at the employee's residence where the employee is responsible for packing it. Once full, United picks up the unit and delivers it to the employee's new residence, where the employee unpacks it. This is a great solution for employees who may need to keep their belongings in storage for a while before being delivered to the final destination.

Features of the storage unit

- Can typically hold items of a 1500 sq. ft. home
- Ground level entry makes loading easier
- Features built-in tie-down rings and smooth interior walls
- Other

Summer is the busiest time of year for moving companies and SLU has a large number of new employees utilizing these services. Business Services wanted to provide the following tips to ease the process of employee relocations:

- The preferred moving sheet (included) contains the contact information for the approved University moving companies.
- Dates for moves over the summer book very early. Please start this process ASAP, as dates are often booked months in advance. Last minute moves are difficult, if not impossible, to schedule.
- The hired employee should reach out to these moving companies to arrange appraisal visits and begin the process of getting bids. Bids from 3 of these companies will be required for moves over $5,000.
- Our contract is with the local affiliate of a national company. The employee should not reach out to the national company or the local affiliate in the region they are moving from.
- The employee will be responsible for any amount over their moving allowance. The department should enter the PO for the moving allowance.

Please contact Ellen Borowiak at eborowi@slu.edu with any questions.
Preferred Movers for New Faculty/Staff Relocations

The following preferred moving companies offer special negotiated rates for Saint Louis University and are able to accommodate international, intrastate, and interstate moves. If offered a relocation reimbursement amount per a job offer from human resources, please work directly with the department you are being hired into for reimbursement procedures and questions.

For moves estimated at $5,000 or above, three competitive bids are required in order to process the purchase order and electronic copies of the estimates should be sent to Business Services (eborowi@slu.edu).

Business Services must review and approve all estimates before the final mover is selected.

Preferred Realtor

J.E. Lauber & Associates
12200 Blackhall Drive
St. Louis, MO 63128
www.jelauber.com

Saint Louis University is proud to recommend J.E. Lauber & Associates, a local real estate company with substantial relocation experience. They have been in business for over 35 years and worked with Saint Louis University for the past 20 years. They have been instrumental in Saint Louis University's expansion through their assistance in the procurement of both residential and commercial real estate properties. During this expansion, the Realtors at J.E. Lauber & Associates have relocated (whether buying, selling or leasing) many individuals. We hope that you will choose J.E. Lauber & Associates to assist you with your move to St. Louis.
Spousal Employment

SLU Career Center
Saint Louis University is committed to addressing the spousal and partner employment needs of our faculty and staff employment candidates and employees. We are proud to offer access to our very own Career Center. Spouses of a relocating employee may make 13 appointments with one of our career counselors, at no cost to them. The SLU career center offers many services including resume review and job search assistance. For more information on the Career Center, or to make an appointment, please visit http://slu.edu/x28683.xml.

Saint Louis Regional Higher Education Recruitment Consortium
As part of this commitment to employees and their spouses, SLU was one of the founding members of the Saint Louis Regional Higher Education Recruitment Consortium (STL HERC). Through the sharing of information and resources, the St. Louis Regional HERC supports its member institutions in attracting and retaining outstanding faculty, administrators, and staff with a particular focus on candidates from diverse backgrounds and dual career couples. The STL HERC helps job seekers find faculty, staff, and executive openings at regional colleges, universities, teaching hospitals and affiliated institutions. The job board at www.stlherc.org is free to all job seekers.

In terms of the job board, currently there are approximately 600 faculty, research and staff positions online. They are always changing and being updated. The job board gets about 1,000 "views" every day. Current members: Barnes Jewish Hospital, Central Methodist University Adult Degree Program, Donald Danforth Plant Science Center, East Central College, Fontbonne University, Harris-Stowe State University, Lewis & Clark Community College, Lindenwood University, Maryville University, Saint Charles Community College, Saint Louis College of Pharmacy, Saint Louis Community College, Saint Louis University, University of Illinois -Springfield, University of Missouri -Saint Louis, Washington University in Saint Louis.

International Faculty and Staff Association (IFSA)

The IFSA assists new employees with their transition to the United States and to the SLU community. They are comprised of approximately 90 members that serve as a resource for international staff and faculty, as well as the entire SLU community. They are your first stop for information regarding international affairs and can help with anything from international research to international grocery stores. They even have a list of hundreds of ethnic restaurants in the St. Louis area. Internal users can access the IFSA's google site: https://sites.google.com/a/slu.edu/ifsa/. If you have any questions for the IFSA (whether or not you are a current SLU employee), please contact them at ifsa@slu.edu.
