ABOUT AMERICAN STUDIES AT SLU

1. Welcome to the Department

Welcome to the graduate program in American Studies at Saint Louis University!

Our department is committed to excellence and originality in research, teaching, and service. Together, we work towards these goals by building strong mentoring relationships, establishing dynamic and innovative classroom experiences, and disseminating research through conferences, workshops, exhibits, and publications.

Our graduate students enter our programs with a variety of interests, skills, backgrounds, and professional histories. This is a strength of our interdisciplinary community. At the same time, graduate student cohorts move together through a rigorous curriculum designed to ground their efforts in a common experience and frame of reference.

This handbook serves as an outline of expectations, requirements, and policies regarding your coursework and degree work. Your faculty cohort advisor will go over these with you, and we keep a copy of the most recent handbook on our website. You should also keep this handbook as a reference as you proceed through the program. Both the Office of Graduate Education and the Department of American Studies can make policy changes, so we update this handbook almost every year. Should a major change be made after your first year, you will almost always be offered the option either to follow the new policies or to adhere to the ones from your year of entry.

No doubt you will have questions as you move through your program, but advising and support are easy to find. All incoming students are advised by a faculty cohort advisor until they choose their faculty advisor. For MA students, this is normally by the end of their first year; for doctoral students, this is normally by the end of their second year. Graduate students who begin to teach their own courses will also work with the Department's Pedagogy Mentor. You will routinely receive feedback from the faculty members who teach your courses, who mentor you as a graduate assistant, and, later on, who serve on your committee. Should you choose to complete an internship, the faculty Internship Supervisor will support that process. In addition, all incoming students are assigned a peer mentor to help ease the transition to graduate school.

In short, each member of our American Studies community—staff, faculty, undergraduate and graduate students—will try to answer your questions, prod your thinking in new directions, and develop your skills. We are very happy to have you here, and we look forward to our work together in the years to come. Welcome to the department.

3. Graduate Student Profiles

Here, the term “PhD student” refers to all students who have been accepted into programs culminating in receipt of a PhD, including those still formally in the MA phase of the MA-to-PhD program. “PhD candidate” refers to PhD students who have passed their comprehensive exams.

Khalid Abdulqaadir

PhD student

Khalid.abdulqaadir@slu.edu

I am a veteran and former Intelligence Officer at the Defense Intelligence Agency. I have earned a BS in Business Administration, an MBA, a Master of International Relations, and hold certification in Advanced Russian Language Studies and a Professional Screenwriters Certificate from UCLA. I am a certified screenplay analyst for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences (Oscars), and an essayist who has been published in the Boston Globe and the New York Times. My research interests within American Studies are African American film and literature.

Michael Brickey

PhD candidate | he/him

michael.brickey@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: “Down to the Wire: Cultures of Energy, Politics of Infrastructure, and Energy Justice in the American Midwest since the 1970s”

I study United States cultures of the 20th and 21st centuries with a focus on the culture and political economies of place.

My research interests fall primarily at the interdisciplinary intersection of urban and environmental studies, but also cultural geography, critical race, ethnic, and Indigenous studies, and the energy humanities. My dissertation project will examine the politics of climate change, cultures of energy, and various entanglements over place in the American Midwest. I have a BA in Political Science with a Geography minor from the University of Missouri, an MA in history from San Diego State University, and an MA in American Studies from St. Louis University. In 2019, I helped to co-found the Graduate Public Humanities Working Group at SLU, a volunteer, student-run organization open to all graduate students in the humanities and social sciences with interest in the broad and diverse field of Public Humanities.

Aretha D. Butler

PhD candidate

aretha.butler@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "On the Front Lines: Culture Wars in the Era of Black Lives Matter, 2012–2018"

I am a doctoral student, originally from the Bronx, New York, and began at SLU in Fall 2012. I am also pursuing a graduate minor in Women's and Gender Studies at SLU. I attended DePauw University from 2005 to 2009 as a Posse Scholar and majored in Black Studies and Women's Studies. After graduating from DePauw, I taught middle-school math in New York City as a Teach for America corps member. My current research interests include black popular culture, transnational studies, and critical race theory and race in post-civil rights America.

Gregory Carr

PhD student

gregory.s.carr@slu.edu

I am a local St. Louis historian and PhD student in American Studies. My interests are in urban history and Black political activism. I have been studying the life and works of Martin Luther King, Jr. since graduate school and I am very interested in researching his influence on the ecumenical community in St. Louis. King spoke at Temple Israel (now the Missouri History Museum Archives), Christ Church Cathedral, Washington Tabernacle Missionary Baptist Church, and lastly, at Saint Louis University. His presence in St. Louis ranged from a casual breakfast with a former Morehouse classmate to addressing an interracial audience one day before he was given the Nobel Peace Prize.

Bryonie Carter

PhD candidate

bryonie.carter@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "Rune-Maker, Majic-Maker, Traveler: The Mystical Tourism of H.D. and Her Circle"

My research interests include modernism, feminist theories, mythology, and transnational literature. Currently, I am a Professor of English at Saint Charles Community College.

Zackary Davis

PhD student

zackary.davis@slu.edu

I received my BA at The University of Texas in History, English, and American Studies. My predominant research interests include the history of American policing and efforts at resisting it, protest movements, decoloniality, water distribution, and cultural memory.

Tim Deposki

PhD student

tim.deposki@slu.edu

I am a current local high school American and World history teacher, as well as the sponsor for my school's Youth and Government program, Mock Trial teams, Travel and Cultures Society club, Foundation Junior Board club, and announcer/scoreboard operator for multiple sports. I have a BA in History and a master's in Education from the University of Missouri–St. Louis. My undergraduate research analyzed Saint Louis suburban displacement and my master's research evaluated changing lecture to primary resource analysis to drive historical inquiry and modern connections. Outside of academia, I am still a big history fan, Saint Louis sports fan, video game enthusiast (especially on the N64 and GameCube), and enjoy spending time with my family, friends, and pets.

Amelia Flood

PhD candidate

amelia.flood@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "Lives between Empires: Islanders, Agents, and Activists in the Transimperial US Virgin Islands, 1917–1941"

A St. Louis native, I have completed my master's degree with distinction in American Studies and am currently all-but-dissertation on the path toward earning my doctorate. My dissertation examines the ways islanders, imperial agents, and islands-linked activists experienced and navigated the transition between Danish and US empires in the Danish West Indies/US Virgin Islands. My publications include "'Neither citizen nor alien': Migration, Territoriality, and Malfunctioning Empire in the US Virgin Islands," published in summer 2020 in The Journal of Transnational American Studies. I have presented papers at conferences at SLU, the University of California–Santa Cruz, and the University of Copenhagen in Denmark. I have conducted research at archives on the US mainland and in the US Virgin Islands. My broader research interests include transnational American religion, empire, imperial transition, race, and immigration/migration history in the Gilded Age and Progressive Era. I hold a BA cum laude from Knox College in International Relations and Art History. While at Knox, I received a number of awards including a Ford Fellowship. Professionally I have worked as a newspaper reporter and editor, in the nonprofit sector as a grant writer, and in positions in research administration and communications in higher education.

Robin Hoover

PhD candidate

robin.hoover@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "Closer to Nature: Land, Locals, and Gentrification in the Ozarks"

I received my Bachelor of Science degree in Journalism at Missouri State University and my Master of Social Science degree at the University of Colorado–Denver. I have research interests in transnationalism, environmental history, place and region, urban history, and the history of the American West.

Cicely B. Hunter

PhD candidate

cicely.hunter@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "Blaring Silence: The Silent Protest of 1917 and Its Historical Influence on Activism"

I am a doctoral student originally from Kenosha, Wisconsin, and I joined the SLU American Studies Department in Fall 2014. I graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree from Marquette University in Spring 2014, double majoring in History and Political Science. My current research interests consist of early twentieth-century Black women's history with an emphasis on memory and feminism.

Nathan Johnston

PhD student

nathan.johnston@slu.edu

I joined the American Studies Program in Spring 2021 after many years in the classroom teaching American and World History to local high school students. I have a Bachelor of Journalism and a BA in History from the University of Missouri, and earned an MA in American Culture Studies from Washington University in St. Louis. Having recently begun the program, I have yet to determine a research focus, though my interests lie in urban studies, particularly the rise, fall, and renaissance of industrial Midwestern cities.

Nathan Martel

PhD student

nathan.martel@slu.edu

My research focuses on music as a function of identity formation both in the contemporary and historical context. Examining the relationship between self and community as related to the social formation as well as the structure of feeling inscribed in both the creation and consumption of aural arrangements motivates the investigations explored by my musical inquiries. My scholarly interests also extend to race, urban settings, cultural studies, sociological theory.... look the list is endless. When I am not reading every word assigned, I can be found frequenting local records stores in the endless pursuit of collecting even more vinyl.

Raynah McClure

MA student

raynah.mcclure@slu.edu

I entered SLU with a bachelor's degree in history and constitutional democracy. I have always loved American history, and as a child you could have found me reading autobiographies of U.S. presidents in the library rather than playing at recess. However, after undertaking a course at the University of Missouri–Columbia titled "History of American Law," the significance of understanding history in conjunction with law became especially evident to me. Therefore, I decided to start working towards my master's degree before a law degree in order to prevent myself from succumbing to many of the issues within the American legal system by using the research skills and the "big picture" approach engrained in the day-to-day work of historians.

Uğur Öztürk

PhD candidate

ugur.ozturk@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "Welfare to Self-Care: Cultural Work of Neoliberalism in the United States"

Originally from Turkey, I received a bachelor's degree in American Culture and Literature from Bilkent University. In 2017, I earned my MA in American Studies from Penn State–

Harrisburg. In fall 2018, I became a PhD student in SLU's American Studies department. My research interests involve studying American neoliberalism as a cultural structure that brings market rationality, competition, individualism, and fetishization of wealth into all spheres of life. When I am not studying popular culture to explore the traces of the neoliberal cultural structure, I enjoy writing short stories.

Giuliana Piccione

PhD student | she/her

giuliana.piccione@slu.edu

I am from central Illinois and I studied at Bradley University there, receiving a BA in English and a BS in Sociology. I came to Saint Louis University because American Studies is the perfect place for me to continue pursuing interdisciplinarity in my work. My current research interests include the intersection of historical records and physical objects, sociocultural aspects of storytelling, materiality, and feminism. Additionally, I love to try my hand at things that I'm studying (from calligraphy to lace making) to experience a bit of it myself and I also hope to explore the impacts of that practice.

Emily Quartarone

PhD candidate | she/her/hers

emily.quartarone@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "American Godzilla"

With a BFA in Theatre from Columbus State University and a year working for the Project Continua female biography project (now The New Historia), I came to the field of American Studies with a background in the arts and in public humanities. I earned my MA in American Studies along with a graduate certificate in Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies from The George Washington University in 2017. My research interests include transnationalism, film studies, and the horror genre. Specifically, I study American remakes of foreign horror films and attend to the cultural exchanges and appropriations as well as American exceptionalisms and revisionisms present in these interchanges. I am also a member of the Graduate Public Humanities Working Group here at SLU, and a former American Studies ambassador to the SLU Graduate Student Association.

Darby Ratliff

PhD candidate | she/her/hers

darby.ratliff@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "'Church-School-State': Boarding Schools & Catholic Education in the 19th Century"

I'm a doctoral candidate from Cleveland, Ohio, by way of Buffalo, New York. I have an undergraduate degree in English, creative writing, and political science and a master's degree in higher education and student affairs administration from Canisius College. I'm interested in nineteenth-century Catholicism, Native American history, and archival studies. My dissertation is focused on the intersections between Catholic schools for white students and Catholic schools for Indigenous students and what can be learned about empire, education, and citizenship by studying this history. When not talking about religious history, I can be found with a crossword, watching sports, or discussing the importance of teamwork.

Vanessa Reger

PhD student

anessa.reger@slu.edu

I graduated from SLU in 2023 with my BA in American Studies and History and am excited to continue my education within this department. My main interests in undergrad included American death culture, how Americans cope with trauma induced by conflict (both internal and external), and how influential public memorialization is to the maintenance of public memory. My senior thesis focused on the Korean War Veterans Memorial and an analysis of its ability to hold and transmit memory of the Korean War to the American public. I look forward to further interrogating public memory sites and their influence on public interpretations of the past. I am also deeply interested in folk culture, spirituality, and storytelling as integral parts of maintaining public memory. So please share your ghost stories with me!

Kendyl M. Schmidt

PhD candidate

kendyl.schmidt@slu.edu

Dissertation working title: "Overkill: Culture and Resistance to Anatomical Dissection in Antebellum America"

I am a doctoral student with a long and winding academic trajectory. After receiving my bachelor's degree in Political Science and master's in Public Administration, I spent several years working in health care before returning to Southern Illinois University Edwardsville for my master's in History. I came to Saint Louis University to pursue my research interests which include nineteenth-century death culture and the relationship between science/medicine, religion, and death. I am fascinated by disease and society, my Hogwarts house is Ravenclaw, and my favorite dogs are Corgis.

Rebecca Stokem

PhD student | she/her/hers

rebecca.stokem@slu.edu

I am originally from New Jersey, having received both my B.A. in English and Creative Writing and my M.A. in English Literature from Seton Hall University, where I focused primarily on epistemology and genre conventions in the rise of the novel. My current research and teaching focus is on literary and popular culture portrayals of 20th-21st century wars and the U.S. military, with a particular interest in depictions of the War on Terror. I have also received a graduate minor in Women's and Gender Studies here at SLU. Outside of school, you can usually find me at a movie theater or playing Dungeons & Dragons.

Grace Teofilo

grace.teofilo@health.slu.edu

Born and raised in Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, I graduated from the University of Wisconsin–Madison with bachelor's degrees in History and Political Science, and with certificates in Leadership and Gender & Women's Studies. I work at Saint Louis University as the Program Coordinator for the Center for Interpersonal Education and Research. I am interested in studying interpretation techniques at national parks and ways to connect local communities to historic sites. I am a founding member of the National Association for Interpretation's Young Professional Council and am a Certified Interpretive Guide. I sit on the parish council of St. Francis Xavier (College) Church and am the Parish Liaison for the College Church Young Professionals organization. Previously, I was an Interpretive Park Ranger at Gateway Arch National Park and taught with Disney English in Shanghai, China.

4. History of American Studies at SLU

From its inception, the interdisciplinary endeavor of American Studies has excelled in framing new and exciting questions, expanding the range of sources for research, and devising fresh methodologies for scholarship. The broad contours of the field stretch back to the nineteenth century with the writings of Alexis de Tocqueville, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Ralph Emerson, and John Dewey. In the 1910s and 1920s, critics such as W. E. B. DuBois, Randolph Bourne, Van Wyck Brooks, and Jane Addams energized a generation of American intellectuals around basic questions of identity, culture, and citizenship in a multiethnic and multiracial society.

American Studies emerged in the 1930s as a movement within the universities, particularly among scholars of American literature and history at Yale University, Harvard University, and the University of Minnesota. Much of this generation's work attempted to examine what practitioners then took to be the exceptional qualities of American society and culture. The first PhD in American Studies was granted in 1940 to Henry Nash Smith at Harvard. During the Cold War, universities grew dramatically in size and scope, and the American Studies enterprise expanded with new sources of government and foundation support.

American Studies at Saint Louis University was founded in this context. It initially took shape as a doctoral program housed in the History Department, as an initiative organized in 1963 by historian Martin F. Hasting (1913–2003) under a federal National Defense Education grant. After serving as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences from 1958 to 1963, Hasting stepped down from the College leadership in order to establish the American Studies graduate curriculum. He continued to play a central role in the burgeoning PhD program until 1969, when he joined Plattsburgh State University in New York, founding a Canadian Studies program there.

In 1965, Saint Louis University granted its first American Studies PhD to Albert J. P. McCarthy (1918–1978), an assistant professor in geography at the University. By 1997, one hundred American Studies doctorates had been conferred by the University. (View a full dissertations list in the Appendix.) To date, Saint Louis University hosts the only American Studies PhD program at a Jesuit university, and the only such program at a private university anywhere in the eleven-state region of the Mid-America American Studies Association.

In the 1960s and 1970s, feminism, African American and ethnic studies, and postcolonial theory challenged the American Studies field to incorporate a broader range of voices, and to work for greater inclusion of previously marginalized groups. It was during this period, in 1969, that Sister Elizabeth Kolmer, PhD, established American Studies as a freestanding, independent doctoral program at Saint Louis University, no longer under the aegis of any other academic unit. As director of the newly autonomous American Studies program, Professor Kolmer became the first woman ever named to head a degree-granting academic department or program within the College of Arts and Sciences.

In 1971, Professor Kolmer launched the Master of Arts program in American Studies, with more than twenty MA students earning degrees in the program's first five years. This was followed in 1975 by the establishment of the American Studies undergraduate major. Over the years, many faculty contributed to the program through secondary appointments, creating a cross-disciplinary conversation among Americanists at the University.

As with most humanities fields, American Studies benefited through the 1980s from a deepening critical engagement with issues of race, gender, ethnicity, sexuality, class, and empire, and was shaped by the growing influence of anthropology, folklore studies, material culture studies, postcolonial studies, and visual culture analysis. Throughout the 1990s, American Studies scholars in the US joined with their colleagues abroad to promote the internationalization of the field. At Saint Louis University, the American Studies unit has been a contributor to this expanding global dialogue, particularly in its support of the Maastricht Centre for Transatlantic Studies in the Netherlands and through its exchange partnership with the American Studies Department at the University of Groningen. Most recently, in 2019, Professor Heidi Ardizzone continued this tradition by inaugurating a graduate-level exchange program with the Department of American Culture at Sogang University in Seoul, South Korea.

In 1995, American Studies at SLU obtained department status, a culmination of Professor Kolmer's efforts to institutionalize the field within the University. Professor Kolmer's contributions to the field were recognized in 1996, when the Mid-America American Studies Association established its annual Elizabeth Kolmer Award for American Studies advising and service, naming the prize in her honor. Upon Professor Kolmer's retirement in 2004, the department's classroom in Adorjan Hall was named the Kolmer Seminar Room in commemoration of her four decades of dedicated work as an American Studies teacher, mentor, scholar, and administrator.

In 2000, the University recruited Professor Matthew J. Mancini from Missouri State University to become the American Studies department chairperson. Professor Mancini completed the unit's transformation from its former program configuration, which had relied heavily on secondary appointments, into a full-fledged operating department with its own dedicated tenure-track positions and resources.

During Professor Mancini's fifteen years of leadership, the department deepened its programming at the graduate and undergraduate levels and attracted an increasingly competitive national applicant pool for its doctoral program. At various points during this span, the department's full-time faculty included scholars such as Heidi Ardizzone, Lawrence Barmann, Candy Brown, Joseph Heathcott, Donna Knaff, Benjamin Looker, Shirley "Tuck" Loui, Emily Lutenski, Katherine Moran, Cindy Ott, Jonathan Smith, Shawn Michelle Smith, Deborah Whaley, and Susanne Wiedemann. Professor Mancini's work in program development and mentorship received national recognition in 2018, when the American Studies Association awarded him its prestigious Mary C. Turpie Prize for outstanding accomplishments in those areas.

In May 2015, in an event at Il Monastero, alumni, retired faculty, and current department members celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the first American Studies PhD granted at

SLU. At the gathering, the department and the College of Arts and Sciences established the annual Matthew J. Mancini Award for Outstanding American Studies Dissertation or Thesis, named in honor of outgoing chairperson Matthew Mancini. In a speech on the importance of American Studies to the College of Arts and Sciences mission, Dean Michael D. Barber, SJ, told attendees, "American Studies ... pursues and deepens the academic mission of the College to develop self-reflectivity and provides a model of interdisciplinary teaching and research from which the College has much to learn."

Today, faculty in the department are building on the strong foundation of teaching and mentoring established during the 1960s through 2000s by directors and chairs Martin Hasting, Elizabeth Kolmer, and Matthew Mancini, while developing a range of initiatives in research, teaching, public humanities, and professional and community service.

At present, students can pursue American Studies coursework at hundreds of universities and colleges around the nation and world. American Studies benefits from a rich intellectual heritage, and it produces some of the most exciting work in the humanities and social sciences. Like all disciplines, American Studies faces many challenges ahead, but these make for lively times in the field. Here at Saint Louis University, American Studies majors, minors, and graduate students take an active part in meeting these challenges in the classroom and beyond.

Annual American Studies Distinguished Lecturer Series

In 2012, enabled partly by generous donations from alumni, the department initiated an annual lecture series with presentations given each spring by a distinguished faculty member in the American Studies field. (This series was paused due to COVID restrictions in 2020 and 2021.) Often, the scholar visits have included a brown-bag lunch or other informal gathering with students. The series reflects the department's commitment to introducing community members to cutting-edge research and to fostering relationships between graduate students and American Studies practitioners from beyond our own campus.

SECTION II

GRADUATE DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

6. Requirements for MA in American Studies

Established in 1971, the Master of Arts program in American Studies at Saint Louis University gives students solid grounding in the origins, development, practices, and theoretical framework of the field, as well as aiding them in the pursuit of independent research. The MA is a stand-alone degree for work in arts and cultural institutions, libraries, museums, historical societies, public humanities, nonprofit agencies, and other venues. Some students may also pursue the MA in American Studies as a prelude to further degrees, such as a professional MA or doctorate.

Course Requirements

Thirty (30) credit hours, including Perspectives in American Studies (ASTD 5000). For students who choose the thesis track (outlined below), 6 of these credit hours will consist of Thesis Research (ASTD 5990), taken during the second year of coursework. There is no language requirement for the MA degree.

No more than 6 of the credit hours to be counted toward the degree may be taken outside of American Studies. Such outside courses require the prior approval of the student's faculty advisor.

Qualifying Exam

At the end of their second semester of coursework, all MA and MA-to-PhD students take a two-hour qualifying exam to demonstrate their growing knowledge of the field. The exam consists of essay questions provided by American Studies course instructors. Students must answer two of the questions: one covering material from ASTD 5000, and the other chosen from questions about materials covered in another American Studies class taken during the first year. The exam is a take-home exam, organized by the professor teaching ASTD 5000.

Portfolio Paper or Thesis

After successful completion of the qualifying exam, students pursue one of two research paper options: a portfolio paper or a thesis.

A portfolio paper is a 20–30 page research article, typically a revised and expanded seminar paper meant to demonstrate the student's extensive knowledge of their field. It is developed in conjunction with a two-person faculty committee (a chair and one member) over the summer following the first year of the MA program and during the second year of the MA program. A third faculty member will be assigned as an additional reader by the department.

A thesis is a more developed project with an original argument, typically 60–80 pages in length, based on extensive primary and secondary research. It is developed in conjunction with a three-person faculty committee (a chair and two additional members) over the summer following the first year of the MA program and during the second year of the MA program. To pursue the thesis option, a student must obtain prior permission from the prospective thesis advisor by the end of their first year in the program.

Oral Examination

After the student's committee has approved the final version of the portfolio paper or thesis, the student completes a one-hour oral examination before three faculty members on a date set by the department. For a portfolio paper, these will be the members of the two-person portfolio committee plus an additional faculty member, and the exam will be on the portfolio paper. For a thesis, these will be the members of the three-person thesis committee, and the exam will be a public defense of the thesis. The final accepted copy must be submitted to all committee members at least 16 days before the oral examination date set by the department.

Advising

During the student's first year in the MA program, the student's advisor is the faculty member serving as cohort advisor for that year's entering class of graduate students. (The Graduate Coordinator generally fills this role.) By the end of the first year, the student should have selected a faculty member to serve as chair of their thesis or portfolio-paper committee; that faculty member also then becomes the student's advisor.

Sample Degree Plan

In general, the MA degree will be completed in four semesters, and will look as follows:

Year 1
Fall	ASTD 5000 (3 credits) 6 additional coursework credits
Spring	9 coursework credits Qualifying Exam
Year 2
	Portfolio Paper Option	Thesis Option
Fall	6 coursework credits Portfolio paper work	3 credits of ASTD 5990 (MA thesis) 3 additional coursework credits
Spring	6 coursework credits Completion of portfolio paper Oral exam (on portfolio paper)	3 credits of ASTD 5990 (MA thesis) 3 additional coursework credits Oral exam (on MA thesis)

7. Requirements for Accelerated BA/MA in American Studies

The accelerated Bachelor and Master of Arts program in American Studies, begun in 2012, offers the opportunity for outstanding American Studies undergraduate majors to begin a master's program in their senior year, completing the MA with a full-time fifth year of graduate study after their successful completion of both the first-year requirements and their undergraduate degree and major.

Course Requirements

The BA and MA course requirements are the same as they are for students in the stand-alone BA and stand-alone MA programs; students who are enrolled in the accelerated BA/MA, however, are able to double-count up to four graduate courses (12 credits) taken during their senior undergraduate year toward both degrees. By taking two to four graduate courses during the senior year, and possibly a graduate-level summer course or internship, students can complete their MA in addition to their BA in only 12–14 additional months.

There is no language requirement for the accelerated BA/MA.

Qualifying Exam

During the senior undergraduate year, students enrolled in the accelerated BA/MA program take a one-hour qualifying exam to demonstrate their growing knowledge of the field. The exam is similar to that taken by first-year MA and MA-to-PhD students (see sections 6 and 8 in this handbook); however, it covers material from only one graduate course (ASTD 5000) rather than material from two. The exam, consisting of one essay question, generally occurs at the end of the semester in which ASTD 5000 is taken. The exam has no bearing on a student's grade in ASTD 5000. The exam is a take-home exam, organized by the professor teaching ASTD 5000.

Performance Review

In order to advance to the full-time MA year after the conferral of the BA, students must receive at least a B in graduate courses taken as an undergraduate, clear any incomplete grades on their undergraduate transcripts, and pass their qualifying exam.

Portfolio Paper or Thesis

Portfolio paper or thesis requirements are the same as for students in the stand-alone MA program (see section 6 above for details). Students choosing the thesis option will generally take 3 credits of thesis work (ASTD 5990) in the fall semester of their second year and 3 credits in the following spring semester. As in the stand-alone MA program, students wishing to pursue the thesis option must receive approval from their thesis advisor at the end of their first year.

Oral Examination

The oral examination requirements are the same as for students in the stand-alone MA program (see section 6 above for details).

Advising

During the student's first year in the accelerated BA/MA program (i.e., the student's senior undergraduate year), the student's advisor is the faculty member serving as cohort advisor for the student's entering class of graduate students. (The Graduate Coordinator generally fills this role.) By the end of the first (or senior undergraduate) year, the student should have selected a faculty member to serve as chair of their thesis or portfolio-paper committee; that faculty member also then becomes the student's advisor.

Sample Degree Plan

Typically, the accelerated BA/MA will be completed as follows:

Year 1 (senior undergraduate year)
Fall	ASTD 5000 (3 credits)
Spring	3–6 grad. coursework credits Qualifying exam Performance review
Summer	3–6 grad. coursework credits

Year 2 (full-time MA year)
	Portfolio Paper Option	Thesis Option
Fall	9 grad. coursework credits	3 credits of ASTD 5990 (MA thesis) 6 additional grad. coursework credits
Spring	9 grad. coursework credits Completion of portfolio paper Oral exam (on portfolio paper)	3 credits of ASTD 5990 (MA thesis) 6 additional grad. coursework credits Oral exam (on MA thesis)

Funding

Following admission to the accelerated BA/MA program, the student remains strictly an undergraduate for the purposes of financial aid and scholarships until the bachelor's degree is awarded.

Most years, tuition waivers will be available to one BA/MA student for the two semesters of the accelerated BA/MA's second year. When available, BA/MA students may also receive graduate assistantships with living stipends in exchange for ongoing research, teaching, or other work as assigned by department faculty. To be considered for tuition waivers or assistantships, students must submit their application by the department's graduate application deadline, and must remain in good standing during their first year.

Admissions

Students may indicate to their advisors an interest at any time in their sophomore or first semester of their junior years. Applications are due by the department's annual graduate application deadline of December 15, and must be made using the application form available on the College of Arts and Sciences website.

Requirements for admission are as follows:

- Applicants must have completed a minimum of 90 hours toward the bachelor's degree by the end of the junior year, and 105 hours by the end of the fall semester of the senior year. Transfer students must have completed a minimum of 30 hours at SLU.

- Applicants should have an overall GPA of 3.7 in their American Studies major.
- Applications should include a goals statement, a writing sample, and the College of Arts and Sciences admission form. Letters of recommendation are not required. Criteria are the same as for other applicants: a coherent goals statement, clear writing sample, and grades as stipulated above.

This program is designed as a terminal degree. Students who wish to apply for entry to the PhD program must complete a new application to the Arts and Sciences graduate division.

8. Requirements for MA-to-PhD in American Studies

Established in 1963, the Doctor of Philosophy program in American Studies is the oldest of the department's degree programs. The PhD is the terminal research degree in American Studies. The pursuit of the doctorate is an intensive process of acquiring the breadth and depth sufficient to produce an original contribution to the field. It is a pursuit that requires a high degree of flexibility in the curriculum, substantial self-motivation on the part of the student, and strong mentorship by the faculty. While the doctorate is increasingly the requisite degree for careers with substantial professional responsibility, it is at root a stamp of qualification for research. Thus, the doctorate prepares students for rigorous work in fields that require a foundation in research, writing, analysis, information organization, administration, grant writing, and program development.

The faculty in American Studies recognize that the doctorate alone does not prepare students for professional work. For this reason, we work closely with students to develop a professional plan, and to build into the PhD a range of experiences relevant to each student's interest. Such training includes media and technology workshops, teaching certificates, museum internships, nonprofit management courses, and leadership development.

Full-time PhD students in the Department of American Studies normally receive packages of support in the form of graduate assistantships, which provide financial assistance in the form of tuition waivers and living stipends in exchange for ongoing research, teaching, or other work as assigned by department faculty. Students holding assistantships are expected to make constant, significant progress toward the fulfillment of their requirements—including completing their course work, language requirement, and comprehensive examinations—during their years of support or they may be deemed ineligible for further assistantship support from the department.

Course Requirements

Fifty-seven (57) credit hours beyond the BA, including:

- Perspectives in American Studies (ASTD 5000)—3 credits
- The Practice of American Studies (ASTD 5900)—3 credits
- Dissertation Colloquium (ASTD 6100)—3 credits
- Dissertation Research (ASTD 6990)—12 credits

Students entering with MA degrees may be able to count up to 12 credit hours (or the institutional equivalent) of relevant prior coursework toward these hours. Students who would like their prior coursework to be considered for SLU credit should see the Graduate Coordinator during their first year. Students who receive 6 or more transfer credits or credits of advanced standing due to prior graduate work at another institution may not take further graduate courses toward the degree outside of SLU.

No more than 6 of the credit hours to be counted toward the degree may be taken outside of American Studies. Such outside courses require the prior approval of the student's faculty advisor.

Language Requirement

The language requirement is fulfilled by a 4000-level course in translation or literature, or by successful completion of a translation exam. (For more information on the translation exam, see "Translation Exam Guidelines" in this handbook.)

The 4000-level language class does not count toward the total number of American Studies graduate course credits required for the degree.

Students whose first language is a language other than English may apply to the department's Graduate Coordinator to have the language requirement waived.

Qualifying Exam

At the end of their second semester of coursework, all MA and MA-to-PhD students take a two-hour qualifying exam to demonstrate their growing knowledge of the field. The exam consists of essay questions provided by American Studies course instructors. Students must answer two of the questions: one covering material from ASTD 5000, and the other chosen from questions about materials covered in another American Studies class taken during the first year. The exam is a take-home exam, organized by the professor teaching ASTD 5000.

Portfolio Paper

Students will be eligible for an MA after completing 30 graduate-level credits and a portfolio paper. The portfolio paper is generally a revised and expanded version of a seminar paper, written as a publishable article. Portfolio requirements are the same as for students in the stand-alone MA program (see section 6 above for details); there is no master's thesis option for MA-to-PhD students. Generally, students in the program complete the portfolio paper and the corresponding oral exam during spring semester of the second year.

Comprehensive Exams

Written Exam

After completing the qualifying exam, students create a faculty committee composed of three field directors, one of whom the student designates as the committee chair. Working closely with the committee members, students develop three literature-review papers, each based in intensive reading in a discrete field or subject area.

Oral Exam

After the three-person committee has accepted final drafts of the written exam, the student schedules a 90-minute oral exam. The accepted versions of the written exam materials must be supplied to all committee members at least 16 days before the oral exam, to allow the student and department to complete necessary paperwork for the Office of Graduate Education by the applicable pre-exam deadline. In general, full-time students aim to take their oral exams at the end of their third year. Funded students must complete the comprehensive exam within one calendar year of completing coursework (excluding Dissertation Colloquium) or they may be deemed ineligible for further assistantship support from the department.

Registration during Exams

Students who have completed coursework should register for ASTD 6990. To maintain good standing, students working on comprehensive exams must meet with their committee chair at least twice per semester; arranging to do this is the student's responsibility.

Candidacy

After students successfully complete the comprehensive exams and all other requirements, the Office of Graduate Education advances them to candidacy.

Dissertation Proposal and Dissertation Proposal Presentation

Students must submit a dissertation proposal by the end of the second semester following the successful completion of their comprehensive exams, using the template provided by the department. (See "Dissertation Proposal Guidelines" in this handbook.) After the three-person committee has accepted the final version of the proposal, the student schedules a one-hour oral presentation of the proposal before the student's committee and additional faculty.

The accepted version of the proposal must be supplied to all department faculty members (not just members of the committee) at least 16 days before the presentation. Proposal presentations are typically scheduled for one or two days per semester and are open to the public. Upon successful completion of the proposal, the document is placed on file with the department.

Dissertation and Dissertation Defense

Students write their dissertations working closely with their committee. When the student and committee agree that the dissertation is satisfactory, the student schedules a one-hour public defense of the dissertation. Students must submit the final version of the dissertation to their committee at least two weeks before their defense date. In order to obtain a degree in the spring semester, dissertations should be submitted by the end of February. For fall semester, dissertations should be submitted by October. Summer defenses will only be scheduled in extraordinary circumstances, and most often only if a student has submitted a full draft of their dissertation to their committee before May 1.

Registration during the Dissertation

A student researching and writing a dissertation registers for Dissertation Research (ASTD 6990), using the section number of the committee chair. The course is graded as IP (In Progress) or U (Unsatisfactory) until the semester within which the student graduates, when the grade will be S (Satisfactory). Course requirements include meeting with the advisor at least once during the semester; arranging to do so is the student's responsibility. After a student first enrolls in ASTD 6990, they must enroll in that course continuously until the degree is completed.

The Office of Graduate Education requires that students take at least 12 credits of Dissertation Research during their course of study. Since tuition must be paid for these credits, it is recommended that funded students enroll in their 12 credits of Dissertation Research during the semesters for which they have available tuition credits. After these 12 credits are accrued, students may continue to enroll in ASTD 6990 for 0 credits, unless they have received an extension of time to degree.

Extension of Time to Degree

Students who receive an extension of time to degree to complete the dissertation are generally required by the Office of Graduate Education to enroll in ASTD 6990 for one additional credit hour for each semester of extension granted; tuition is charged for such credit hours.

The department will only approve petitions for extension of time to degree in exceptional circumstances and for those who have successfully defended their dissertation proposals and are making steady, demonstrable progress on their dissertations. Students who cannot make progress on the dissertation due to illness, financial needs, or other extenuating circumstances are encouraged to request a formal Leave of Absence. For more information on petitioning for extensions, and the limitations on these petitions, consult the Office of Graduate Education.

COVID-related Extensions

In Fall 2020, the Office of Graduate Education announced an additional year of permitted extension of allowable time to degree for certain graduate students due to COVID-19's potential impact on student research progress. The policy was approved by the Graduate Academic Affairs Committee (GAAC) and the Council of Academic Deans and Directors (CAAD).

The policy reads: "Degree-seeking graduate students enrolled during the 2019–20 academic year will be awarded a one-year extension of time to degree upon petition to the Provost's office following programmatic endorsement of the petition. This extension of the time limit to degree has no bearing on funding. Decisions regarding any additional years of financial support are at the sole discretion of your individual academic units and are subject to federal and state financial aid regulations."

The COVID extension, unlike standard extensions, does not require that students pay for one credit of tuition during the extension period.

This is a supplementary extension, which can be taken in addition to the standard extensions already permitted. Students do not need to wait until they have exhausted existing extensions to apply for the COVID extension; they may apply for the COVID extension first if they would like. Eligible students should apply for this extension at the beginning of the semester before they hope to use it. American Studies students applying for departmental endorsement of such petitions need not include direct evidence of the pandemic's specific effects on their progress.

Advising

During the student's first two years in the PhD program, the student's advisor is the faculty member serving as cohort advisor for the student's entering class of graduate students. (The Graduate Coordinator generally fills this role.) By the end of the second year, the student should have selected a faculty member to serve as chair of their comprehensive exams committee; that faculty member also then serves as the student's advisor until the student has reached the stage of selecting a dissertation advisor.

Sample Degree Plan

A sample degree plan for a full-time PhD student looks as follows—this will vary based on the course credits granted for prior MA degrees and the scheduling of departmental course offerings.

Unless an alternative arrangement has been made, all students on GAsip are expected to take 9 credit hours a semester until coursework is completed.

Year 1
Fall	Spring
ASTD 5000 (3 credits) 6 additional coursework credits	9 coursework credits Qualifying exam
Year 2
Fall	Spring

9. Requirements for Graduate Certificate in American Studies

In 2019, the department launched a graduate certificate program to allow students in other SLU graduate programs, international exchange students to our department, and interested community members to earn a certification in American Studies.

The certificate can be earned by completing a total of nine credits in graduate-level department courses plus a qualifying exam. A SLU graduate certificate is identified on a student's transcript as an independent academic program, and it is recognized by a formal certificate of completion from the Office of the Registrar.

Eligibility

Individuals in any of the following categories are eligible to apply for entry and may find it advantageous to acquire an American Studies certificate:

- Graduate students already enrolled in other programs at SLU. For these students, a certificate in American Studies offers a minor field to enhance their portfolio. American Studies is an eighty-year-old field with its own organizations, journals, canon, and methods, and it complements and enhances cognate fields, especially for academic and public-humanities job markets.
- Community members who want a postgraduate certificate in American Studies but don't want or have time for a full MA. A graduate certificate in American Studies can offer professional development or targeted postgraduate training. Since American Studies is interdisciplinary, the curriculum often connects academic study to community institutions, organizations, and populations. Credits earned from a certificate could apply to a later MA.
- Exchange or visiting students to our graduate program. MA students in American Studies from Sogang University, the University of Groningen, or other approved programs are eligible to complete this graduate certificate during their semester at SLU.

Course Requirements

Nine (9) graduate-level credit hours within the Department of American Studies, including Perspectives in American Studies (ASTD 5000). These may include one 3-credit course that is cross-listed between American Studies and a student's home department at SLU, regardless of which department's course number the student uses for registration, so long as the cross-listed course is generated by American Studies and taught or co-taught by an American Studies faculty member.

While certificate students are encouraged to begin with ASTD 5000, the courses may be taken in any order. A student may also apply to enter the certificate program after having completed some of the required coursework.

Qualifying Exam

During the academic year in which ASTD 5000 is taken, students enrolled in the certificate program take a one-hour qualifying exam to demonstrate their growing knowledge of the field. The exam is similar to that taken by first-year MA and MA-to-PhD students (see sections 6 and 8 in this handbook); however, it covers material from only one graduate course (ASTD 5000) rather than material from two. The exam, consisting of one essay question, generally occurs at the end of the semester in which ASTD 5000 is taken. The exam has no bearing on a student's grade in ASTD 5000. The exam is a take-home exam, organized by the professor teaching ASTD 5000.

Applications

For further information on the program and requirements for entry, visit <https://bit.ly/30MfHBt>. Non-SLU applicants can apply at that address; students already enrolled in a SLU program can apply by submitting the form found at https://www.slu.edu/registrar/pdfs/postbac_certificate.pdf.

10. Translation Exam Guidelines

The translation exam requires that the student demonstrate fourth-semester language proficiency by translating 350–500 words of expository prose in 90 minutes. The American Studies Department will choose one article in the student's chosen language as the basis for the exam. The article will be relevant to American Studies. From that article the student will select which passage or passages to translate. Students may bring a dictionary to consult during the exam, but not a grammar book. Exams will be proctored.

Exams are graded on a pass/fail basis. To pass the exam, the student must demonstrate reading comprehension at the required level, which is indicated by the following:

- 1) The student is able to translate their chosen passage or passages into idiomatic English. The translation does not have to be elegant, but it should be clear and expressive of the passage as a whole.
- 2) The student is able to demonstrate an awareness of how sentences work in the language being translated, including syntax and grammar.

To ensure the above, students should avoid the following:

- 1) Awkward, non-idiomatic sentences that reveal word-by-word translation.
- 2) Numerous mistranslated words.
- 3) Confusion between the subjects and objects of sentences.
- 4) Skipping too many words or phrases, although students may choose to skip over brief but particularly thorny sections of the text rather than getting entangled in them for too long.

When taking the exam, students are encouraged to choose a passage or passages that advantage them, read the passage or passages quickly for overall comprehension, and then do their best to complete the required amount in the time frame of the exam. If the student must choose between quantity and quality, the student should choose quality.

If the student fails the exam once, the student may retake it, but will be provided with a different article. If the student fails the exam a second time, the student must satisfy the language requirement through coursework.

11. Dissertation Proposal Guidelines

Title Page

1. Your working title should be centered at the top of the page. It should be in all capital letters, double-spaced, and in bold type, as follows:

THE BEST DISSERTATION TITLE EVER: UNTIL IT CHANGES

2. Your name should be centered below the title. You should include any previous degrees alongside your name. This should not be in bold type, and it should have standard capitalization:

John Smith, B.A., M.A.

3. The center of the page should have the following text, centered in the middle of the page (from top to bottom):

A Dissertation Proposal Presented to the Graduate Faculty of the Department of American Studies in Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for the Degree of Ph.D.

Month and Day of Submission, 2018

4. Finally, please include the following, right-justified and at the bottom of the page:

COMMITTEE IN CHARGE OF CANDIDACY

Associate Professor Katherine Moran,

Chairperson and Advisor

Associate Professor Heidi Ardizzzone

Associate Professor Benjamin Looker

Part I: Project Overview (approximately 6 pages)

This section should lay out the topic and themes the dissertation will explore and explain its place in the context of the appropriate field or fields with which it engages. In other words, it should answer the following questions: What scholarly problem will the dissertation address? What questions will the research aim to answer? Explaining the parameters and significance of the dissertation will require attention to related scholarship in the field. If the topic has been studied before, what is different about your approach? If you are introducing a new topic to the field of study, what is its audience? How will your work intervene in existing scholarly conversations?

Part II: Methodology and Source Base (approximately 3–5 pages)

Interdisciplinary work is one of the defining characteristics of American Studies. In order to demonstrate your participation in the field, you should be able to name and describe the disciplinary and interdisciplinary methods, theories, and/or analytics that you will draw on, as well as how they interact with one another. You should also discuss the primary sources you will use, and why. As you consider what sources are necessary to complete your project, pay some attention to practical issues like access to collections and the funding or timing of research trips.

Part III: Chapter Summaries (approximately 6 pages)

A finished dissertation is generally 200–300 pages long with 4–6 chapters in addition to an introduction and conclusion. Here, you will describe each of these components. Each should have a title and an accompanying 1–2 pages that describe the contents and goals of each chapter, its proposed argument, and its sources. Please pay attention to the overall structure of the dissertation and to how the chapters relate to one another. Also consider how the topics of each chapter fit into the entire dissertation, which you laid out in Part I.

Part IV: Bibliography (approximately 6–10 pages)

This section should be a correctly and consistently formatted bibliography that includes separate sections for both primary and secondary sources, as well as (if applicable) lists of periodicals and/or archival collections that you plan to consult.

12. Student Responsibilities and Annual Graduate Student Review

Deadlines

Graduate students are responsible for staying apprised of and meeting all dates and deadlines required by the Office of Graduate Education, such as when to notify the Office of Graduate Education of intent to graduate.

Expectation for Attendance at Department Academic Events

The Department of American Studies is a community of scholars. When graduate students and faculty choose to join that community, they indicate their intent to be full participants in the department's intellectual life and activities. Except in special circumstances, it is expected that graduate students will attend all academic events held by the department. These include lectures by visiting scholars, professional development workshops, research presentations by peers, American Studies senior-thesis presentations, and the like. (This expectation does not apply to students seeking a graduate certificate only.)

Exemptions will be made by advisors for students whose outside work schedules, residency outside the St. Louis metropolitan area, or other significant factors preclude participation in such events on an ongoing basis. If a graduate student must miss an individual scheduled academic event due to a special situation (for instance, travel, a family occasion, etc.), then that student should inform their advisor in advance.

Students who consistently fail to attend departmental academic events without giving notice or receiving exemption may be deemed "not in good standing" for the purposes of future assistantship allocations, eligibility for awards from the American Studies Alumni Research Fund, department recommendations for University-wide fellowships and grants, and/or the annual graduate student review process.

Annual Graduate Student Review

The Office of Graduate Education requires all SLU master's and doctoral students to undergo an annual review of their progress toward the degree. In American Studies, students will complete a self-evaluation every year and submit it to the department's administrative assistant by January 31. If January 31 falls on a weekend or University holiday, the self-evaluation document will instead be due on the University's next regular business day.

The student will then meet with their advisor to discuss this self-evaluation and their progress in general. This form, along with a meeting report (signed by both student and advisor), will be filed with the department. Students will receive a copy of the meeting report. A summary report of the results of annual reviews for all graduate students in the department will be submitted to the Associate Dean for Graduate Affairs in the College of Arts and Sciences by the end of the spring semester.

Warnings

If the graduate student's advisor and the department chair have become significantly concerned about the student's progress and/or performance, a formal warning will be issued to the student. The warning will document (1) the area(s) of concern, (2) the corrective action that must be taken by the student, (3) the resources available to offer the student help and support, and (4) the possible outcomes if the student meets or fails to meet the requirements for corrective action. The student will be asked to meet with their advisor to discuss this warning.

SECTION III

ASSISTANTSHIPS AND RESEARCH FUNDING

13. Departmental Graduate Assistantship and Fellowship Information

Graduate Assistantship Information

Graduate assistants are expected to work 20 hours per week during each 9-month contract period. Graduate Assistants should also consult the Office of Graduate Education's manual, "Policies and Procedures Manual for Graduate Assistants and Fellows." It can be found here: https://www.slu.edu/academics/graduate/current-students/information_for_ga/ga_manual_july_2017.pdf

Responsibilities and Expectations

In American Studies, graduate assistants may work as research assistants, teaching assistants, course instructors, or department assistants. In some cases, graduate assistantships may include a range of these duties. Overall, graduate assistantships complement graduate education by providing additional training in research, teaching, professional skills, administration, and a deeper understanding of the discipline.

- A department assistant is mentored by the department chair and helps with departmental development, including advertising, programming, and other department projects.
- A research assistant is mentored by an individual faculty member and may do library and archival research, fieldwork, or aid in the preparation of research proposals, manuscripts, or grants.
- A teaching assistant is mentored by the faculty instructor of an undergraduate course, and may work with students in small groups, lead discussion sections, proctor exams, grade papers, and prepare lectures.
- A course instructor is mentored by the department's Pedagogy Mentor and designs and teaches their own undergraduate class on a topic determined in consultation with the department faculty. Responsibilities also include attending monthly departmental pedagogy workshops, submitting the draft syllabus in advance for faculty comment and approval, and attending at least one workshop at the Reinert Center.

As part of their work responsibilities to the department, graduate assistants are expected to attend all scheduled department academic events throughout the year. A graduate assistant should speak with their advisor if circumstances make such attendance difficult or impossible.

Orientation, Training, and Mentoring

Graduate Assistants receive an orientation at the beginning of each academic year, generally on the same day as the new student orientation and department welcome reception. At the orientation—which is conducted by the Graduate Coordinator and the Pedagogy Mentor—Graduate Assistants learn their assignments, are introduced to their mentors, and go over assistantship policies and procedures. Ongoing training occurs throughout the year, managed by the Graduate Assistant's particular faculty mentor(s).

Evaluation

At the end of each semester, Graduate Assistants will be invited (but not required) to offer evaluations of their assistantship experiences. They will be prompted to do so by an email from the Graduate Coordinator. All evaluations should be sent to the Department Chair; if the Chair is your faculty mentor, your evaluation should be sent to the Graduate Coordinator. These evaluations will be kept confidential unless the student gives written permission to share them.

At the end of each semester, each faculty mentor will also be prompted by the Graduate Coordinator to evaluate their Graduate Assistant's performance on a Satisfactory/Unsatisfactory basis. Any Unsatisfactory evaluations will be shared with the Graduate Assistant by the faculty mentor and Graduate Coordinator. Failure to complete Graduate Assistant work, or multiple Unsatisfactory evaluations, will result in the student being issued a warning by the department.

Assistantship Income

Graduate assistants receive an $21,500 stipend annually, paid out over the academic year. This is taxable income, delivered via monthly paychecks. Direct deposit is required and will be arranged at the Office of Graduate Education's orientation for new graduate students. Graduate assistants also receive 18 credit hours of tuition remission per academic year and health insurance benefits that extend the calendar year.

University Fellowship Information

The University offers four-year Diversity and Presidential Fellowships to a small number of incoming graduate students on a competitive basis. Per University policy, fellows must submit a self-review to the department's Graduate Coordinator by February 28 each year.

Like graduate assistants, University fellowship holders are expected to attend all scheduled department academic events throughout the year. A fellowship holder should speak with their advisor if circumstances make such attendance difficult or impossible.

14. American Studies Alumni Research Fund

The department's American Studies Alumni Research Fund, established in fall 2012, offers financial support for research travel undertaken by current American Studies graduate students and undergraduate majors. This support is made possible in large part through the generosity of SLU American Studies alumni donors.

These grants have a per recipient limit of $500 for each academic year (fall–summer). The department faculty review applications three times per year: in the fall semester, spring semester, and early summer. Awards will be made in the spring and summer application rounds only if the fund has not been exhausted during the year's preceding application rounds.

Preference will be given to applications proposing research travel, or non-travel-related research costs, with a clear relationship to a significant requirement within the applicant's program of study (i.e., senior thesis project, MA thesis, pre-dissertation exploratory work, or PhD dissertation research). Students are welcome to apply for funds to cover conference travel if they also have applied for GSA and Knoedler funds, but these applications will be given lowest priority.

Application Instructions

Application due dates are October 1 (for the fall-semester award cycle), February 1 (for the spring-semester award cycle), and June 1 (for the summer award cycle). If a listed due date falls on a weekend or a University holiday, applications will instead be due on the University's next regular business day.

Applications will be considered on a competitive basis. To apply, send to the department chairperson a proposal containing:

- Your name and contact information
- The title of your research project, a brief abstract, and an explanation of the project's relationship to your trajectory through your American Studies degree program
- Projected dates of travel
- The archive(s) you will visit or the other research activity requiring travel
- Which collections you expect to examine, or what other primary sources you expect to consult or collect, and an explanation of these sources' relevance to your project
- An itemized funding request, along with a basic budget showing cost estimates for travel, lodging, and research expenses
- Text of concluding report(s) on past Alumni Research Fund award usage (if applicable)

Conditions and Reporting

Travel expenses are on a reimbursement basis, and award recipients must coordinate with the department administrative assistant before incurring any expenses for which they expect reimbursement. All funded travel must be completed within six months of the original application due date for the semester in which the student applied. Recipients must submit a one-page report to the department chairperson within one month of the completion of the funded travel; recipients who do not file this report will be ineligible for future awards from this fund.

15. SLU Dissertation Fellowship: American Studies Nomination Procedure

Each year the University offers a limited number of 11-month dissertation fellowships for doctoral candidates whose work “demonstrates outstanding academic achievement and whose dissertation will significantly extend the body of knowledge within their discipline.” Recipients are chosen by the Office of Graduate Education on a competitive basis. Among other Office of Graduate Education eligibility criteria, applicants must have completed the dissertation proposal process. More information is provided in the Dissertation Fellowships section at: <https://tinyurl.com/3uryx2ev>

Applying to Become a Department Nominee

Every SLU department may put forward two nominees for this annual award. Eligible American Studies doctoral candidates wishing to be considered as potential departmental nominees should express interest to a department faculty member in writing at least 14 days ahead of the Office of Graduate Education’s announced deadline by which departments must submit final nomination packets (usually set for late in fall semester) or 14 days before the last day of the fall-semester final exam period, whichever comes sooner.

They should also furnish the department faculty with draft versions of the documents required of nominees by the Office of Graduate Education, though such documents need not be the final versions that would accompany an eventual nomination packet. (View the Dissertation Fellowships section of the webpage listed above to determine what documents are required of nominees.)

Department Nomination Process and Criteria

American Studies faculty will select the department’s two annual nominees from among those eligible doctoral candidates who express interest and provide the requisite documents in a timely fashion.

The department’s selection criteria include promise, creativity, and rigor of the dissertation project, and nature of the research or writing progress made thus far. However, faculty may also take into account relevant factors unrelated to the quality of the student’s dissertation work: particularly, the Office of Graduate Education’s stated policy that students who have formally proposed during the preceding two semesters will be given preference during the University selection process.

16. Internal Funding Opportunities for American Studies Graduate Students

Knoedler Student Research Fund

Knoedler Fund awards are allocated by the College of Arts and Sciences to support scholarly and creative activities by undergraduate and graduate students. Though the award previously was open only to undergraduates, beginning in Fall 2017 graduate students are also invited to apply. Eligible expenses include research supplies, computer software, minor equipment, and travel to off-campus research sites and scholarly meetings, with a maximum request amount of $500. Deadlines are generally October 1 (for fall-semester funding) and February 15 (for spring-semester funding), though prospective applicants should confirm these dates in advance. Full application details are available on the College of Arts and Sciences website.

Graduate Student Association Conference Awards

Graduate students may apply to receive a 50-percent reimbursement of eligible conference-related expenses, with caps per award of $200 for those attending a conference, $300 for those presenting at a domestic conference, and $400 for those presenting at a foreign conference. Restrictions apply. Applications are due within thirty days of the conference's conclusion. For further information, see the Graduate Student Association website.

Graduate Student Association Brennan Summer Fellowship Awards

Graduate students can receive summer funding, awarded on a competitive basis, to support preparation for comprehensive exams as well as work on MA theses or PhD dissertations. Exam preparation awards are for $500; master's thesis awards are for $1,000; and dissertation awards are for $2,000. Applications are generally due on March 1 of each year; prospective applicants should confirm the due date well in advance. Full instructions for applicants are available on the Graduate Student Association website.

Graduate Student Association Publication Awards

Up to 50 percent of the costs incurred by a graduate student as part of the publication process for a scholarly work (e.g. image-reproduction rights, permissions, etc.) may be reimbursed by the GSA. The maximum award amount is $500. The work must have been accepted for publication at the time of the application for reimbursement. Full application instructions are available on the Graduate Student Association website.

American Studies Alumni Research Fund

As described elsewhere in this handbook, the American Studies Department offers support for graduate and undergraduate students undertaking research travel with grants from the American Studies Alumni Research Fund, which is made possible by donations from SLU American Studies alumni. Maximum awards are $500 per recipient in each application cycle; application deadlines are October 1, February 1, and June 1. See Section III, chapter 11, above for further information on eligibility and application procedures.

SLU Dissertation Fellowship

As described elsewhere in this handbook, the University each year offers a limited number of 11-month dissertation fellowships for doctoral candidates whose work “demonstrates outstanding academic achievement and whose dissertation will significantly extend the body of knowledge within their discipline.” Each department may nominate up to two doctoral candidates for consideration. See Section III, chapter 12, above for instructions on applying to become a department nominee for this fellowship.

Graduate Student Foreign Travel Fund

The College of Arts and Sciences provides funding of up to $1,000 to one graduate student per year for international travel undertaken for research and study purposes. Travel to conferences is excluded from consideration. Proposals are generally due October 15, though prospective applicants should confirm the date in advance. Application instructions are available on the College of Arts and Sciences website.

Since only one student from each department may apply, American Studies students considering applying should speak with the department chair early in the fall semester. If more than one American Studies student applies, the department will have the responsibility of determining which application to forward to the College for entry in the competition.

Rhelda Marbry Morgan Book Fund Award

This award, administered by the Office of Graduate Education, is named in honor of Rhelda Marbry Morgan, an American Studies PhD candidate and dedicated local educator who was awarded the American Studies doctorate posthumously after her untimely death in 1996 at the age of forty-eight. The award offers $750 toward a recipient's books and other academic supplies over the course of an academic year.

Eligible applicants are those whose backgrounds demonstrate "leadership in promoting diversity and service in economically depressed areas." Applications are generally due in mid-October; prospective applicants are encouraged to confirm the deadline well in advance. Full application instructions can be found on the Office of Graduate Education's website.

Donald G. Brennan Scholarship Fund

The Brennan Fund of the Office of Graduate Education offers $2,000 awards to graduate students who were first-generation college students and who "demonstrate a commitment to diversity and social justice." The award may be used for fees, books, housing, and transportation costs associated with graduate-level study at SLU. Applications are generally due at the end of June; prospective applicants should confirm the deadline well in advance. Full application instructions can be found on the Office of Graduate Education website.

SECTION IV

FURTHER STUDENT RESOURCES

17. Graduate Internships in American Studies

Experiential learning challenges students to expand their knowledge beyond the classroom by performing dedicated work off campus. The goal is to build connections between what students do in their American Studies courses and the practical and intellectual challenges outside of them. To do so provides applied experience and skills while connecting in a sustained and meaningful way with the department mission.

While neither MA nor PhD students in American Studies are required to pursue experiential learning, many of them elect to do so. Graduate students—particularly those considering careers in the public humanities, museums, libraries, historic preservation, or other fields outside of academia—often choose to take an internship for formal course credit.

An internship is a 3-credit course (ASTD 5910 for MA students and ASTD 6910 for PhD students), which requires student work at a partner institution for a minimum of 120 hours (equivalent to eight hours per week during a 15-week semester). American Studies students have held internships at institutions such as ArchCity Defenders, the Saint Louis Art Museum, the Saint Louis Zoo, the Missouri Botanical Gardens, the Missouri History Museum, the Circuit Court Records Project, the Pulitzer Foundation for the Arts, the International Institute, the Contemporary Art Museum, and the City Museum—just to name a few.

Procedures

The procedures for developing a graduate internship, as well as requirements and grading criteria, are described in the department's internship handbook, found at <https://bit.ly/2P8ExVw>. If at all possible, students should begin the process by speaking with the department's faculty internship supervisor no later than four months ahead of the envisioned start date.

After completing a graduate-level internship, a student may enroll in a second internship for graduate course credit only under exceptional circumstances and with the permission of the student's faculty advisor.

18. Directory of Campus Resources

Office of Graduate Education

The Office of Graduate Education (<https://www.slu.edu/academics/graduate/index.php>) is located within the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs. It coordinates SLU's more than 80 graduate programs, along with graduate minors and dual degree programs. Contact information is as follows:

April Trees, PhD
Associate Provost for Graduate Education
april.trees@slu.edu
(314) 977-2601

The associate provost for graduate education is responsible for leading, overseeing and coordinating the development, implementation, and assessment of graduate programs, policies, and support services.

Christine Harper, PhD
Master's Candidacy Specialist (interim)
latoya.cash@slu.edu
(314) 977-2245

The master's candidacy specialist advises master's students in the final semester of their academic career, ensuring that all policies and procedures have been enforced and that students have completed their requirements for degree conferral and understand the graduation process.

Christine Harper, PhD
Doctoral Candidacy Specialist
christine.harper@slu.edu
(314) 977-2243

The doctoral candidacy specialist advises doctoral candidates in the final stages of their academic career, ensuring that all policies and procedures have been enforced and that students have completed their requirements for degree conferral and understand the graduation process.

College of Arts and Sciences

In addition to the Office of Graduate Education, each school and college at SLU has an Associate Dean or Director of Graduate Education who oversees the day-to-day operations of graduate programs in their school or college. American Studies is located in the College of Arts and Sciences. Relevant contact information is as follows:

Donna LaVoie, PhD
Dean, College of Arts and Sciences
donna.lavoie@slu.edu
(314) 977-2227

The College dean establishes College goals and budgeting priorities, serves as liaison to other schools and the higher administration, deals with personnel issues, coordinates and evaluates chairs and program directors, and develops rank and tenure recommendations.

Jennifer Popiel, PhD
Associate Dean for Graduate Affairs
jennifer.popiel@slu.edu
(314) 977-7016

The associate dean for graduate affairs oversees graduate student concerns within the College of Arts and Sciences and monitors graduate program quality.

University Libraries

American Studies graduate students most often use the main library on campus, the Pius XII Memorial Library (www.libraries.slu.edu). The American Studies subject librarian is Jamie Emery, who can help graduate students get acquainted with SLU's library system, research databases, interlibrary loan, and MOBIUS (the Missouri academic library loan system). Contact information is as follows:

Jamie Emery, MS
Research & Instruction Librarian/Professor
jamie.emery@slu.edu
(314) 977-3591

University Bookstore

The main bookstore on campus is the Saint Louis University Barnes and Noble Bookstore (<http://www.slu.bncollege.com>), located in the Busch Student Center at 20 N. Grand Blvd. The bookstore can be contacted at books@slu.edu or (314) 531-7925.

Reinert Center for Transformative Teaching and Learning

The Reinert Center for Transformative Teaching and Learning (<https://www.slu.edu/ctl>) offers workshops, consultations, and mentorship programs for graduate students and faculty seeking to enhance teaching. For graduate students, the center also offers a Certificate in University Teaching Skills, earned by participating in a series of seminars and workshops and developing a teaching portfolio. Contact information is as follows:

Gina Merys, PhD
Director
gina.merys@slu.edu
(314) 977-2197

Mary Cook, MA
Program Manager
mary.cook@slu.edu
(314) 977-3944

University Writing Services

University Writing Services is part of the Student Success Center, located on the third floor of the Busch Student Center. It offers writing consultation to graduate and undergraduate students both in-person and online, as well as additional writing resources such as dissertation writing retreats. Contact information is as follows:

Busch Student Center, Rm. 331
(314) 977-3484
<https://www.slu.edu/life-at-slu/student-success-center/index.php>

Center for Accessibility and Disability Resources

All students have a right to academic accommodations. Furthermore, our community, our classrooms, and our field are enriched by the contributions made by graduate students with disabilities. Graduate students who feel that accommodations might be useful or necessary are encouraged to contact the Center for Accessibility and Disability Resources (CADR) to discuss accommodation requests and eligibility requirements. Contact information is as follows:

Student Wellness

Health Insurance

SLU requires all full-time graduate students to have basic health insurance. If you do not have a graduate assistantship or a fellowship, you will be enrolled in the University Health Plan (<https://www.slu.edu/life-at-slu/student-health/uhp/index.php>), a self-insured health and medical care cost coverage plan sponsored by SLU. Coverage is available to eligible full-time undergraduate, graduate/professional, and medical students, as well as graduate assistants and medical residents. UPH insurance covers 9 months per year. Summers are not covered, nor is summer health insurance required for the general student population. The contact number for the UHP is (314) 977-5666.

If you have other health insurance coverage, you must waive your UHP coverage, or you will be charged. To waive UHP coverage, a completed Health Insurance Waiver Form must be submitted along with evidence of other coverage in effect (a front and back copy of a current insurance card or a letter of verification from current plan). Evidence of other coverage documents must specifically list your name and a policy number. Completed Health Insurance Waiver Forms and evidence of other coverage documents are only applicable to the academic year in which they are submitted. Students who do not submit a Health Insurance Waiver Form and evidence of other coverage during orientation, an open enrollment period, or a special enrollment period will be charged for UHP coverage. Graduate and professional students must submit Health Insurance Waiver Forms and evidence of other coverage documents to the Student Health and Counseling Center staff.

If you have a graduate assistantship, UHP insurance is included as part of your assistantship package.

Student Health Center and University Counseling Center

The Student Health Center (<https://www.slu.edu/life-at-slu/student-health/index.php>) provides medical treatment and health education for full-time and part-time undergraduate and graduate students at SLU. Contact the Center at shc@slu.edu or (314) 977-2323.

The University Counseling Center provides psychological counseling for full-time and part-time undergraduate and graduate students at SLU. Contact the Center at (314) 977-8255. To reach the 24-hour on-call line, call (314) 977-8255, and choose option 9.

Professional Organizations

The American Studies Association: www.theasa.net

The American Studies Association (ASA) is the professional organization for practitioners of American Studies. It is the oldest and largest scholarly association devoted to the interdisciplinary study of US culture both within the nation-state and in global contexts. It publishes the flagship journal in American Studies, American Quarterly.

The Mid-America American Studies Association: www.maasa.net

Founded in 1956 as the Central Mississippi Valley American Studies Association, MAASA is the oldest and geographically largest of the American Studies Association's regional associations. Through conferences, panels, awards, and publication of the journal American Studies, MAASA aims to foster the study of American culture in all its aspects, to provide a forum for communication among members and with the general public, and to facilitate American Studies scholarship and teaching in its eleven-state region and beyond. The four doctorate-granting American Studies departments in the MAASA region (SLU, University of Kansas, University of Iowa, and University of Minnesota) each hold one permanent graduate-student seat on the organization's executive board.
