Instructor: Cicely Hunter
Days: Mondays and Wednesdays
Time: 3:10pm-4:25pm
Location: McGannon Hall 211

Office Hours: By appointment

Course Description:

In today's political climate, there is a need for a greater understanding of racialized violence and protest. This course will examine African Americans and the history of riots and rebellions in America. American Places: Sites of Race Riots and Rebellions is organized chronologically and assesses the end of the Reconstruction era to the present day. Over the course of the semester, students will study how African Americans resisted, fought, and protested. Students will be challenged to approach materials through an interdisciplinary scope as they navigate themes of race, class, and gender.

Learning Objectives:

- Students will recognize important periods, events, people and problems that shaped American history.
- Students will examine the construction of race, gender, sexuality, and class in the United States, and how these have shaped American identities and experiences in terms of disadvantage, privilege, oppression, and resistance.
- Students will practice different disciplinary approaches and apply them to the study of American culture.
- Students will argue concisely and accurately in writing and presentations, and prepare sufficient evidence and reasoning to support claims, including proper documentation of sources.
- Students will integrate academic with practical and vernacular knowledge and apply their skills in the service of others.

Assignments:

Attendance/Participation/Preparation	15%

Student-Led Group Presentation	10%
Paper #1	20%
Final Essay (6-8 pages)	20%

Attendance/Participation/Preparation: This course will introduce a number of complex topics. The purpose of our discussions is to elicit questions, opinions, and beliefs on these subjects. Students are welcomed and encouraged to agree or disagree with any reading, the instructor, or any student in the class. However, I ask that students are respectful while doing so. Students will be graded based on their ability to discuss class materials, ask questions, demonstrate out-of-class preparation, and attentive in class.

Students can miss up to two classes throughout the semester without a grade reduction. After the two excused absences, the student's participation grade will be adversely affected. A student who has missed more than four classes will fail the course. Students can be penalized for excessive tardiness or breaks during class. Exceptions will be made only for documented, serious illnesses or emergencies. Lastly, please do not eat during class.

Blackboard Posts: Each student is required to submit a 250-word reading response to Blackboard every Wednesday by 10:00a.m. Students' Blackboard post should include materials for both Monday's and Wednesday's class. This Blackboard post gives students the opportunity to grapple with their observations, questions, ideas and criticisms that are relevant to the course and subject matter. This is a casual writing assignment and will be assessed according to + – or 0. Students that successfully complete the assignment will receive a + (equivalent to an A), but if the post does not demonstrate knowledge of the week's material, students will receive a – (equivalent to a B-). Students will receive a 0 (equivalent to an F) if they do not complete the assignment. Students can miss 2 out 13 posts without any penalty.

Proposal Paper #1 for Final Essay: Students need to submit a double spaced, 1-2 page-length proposal. Begin the proposal with a brief introduction to the topic and the cultural or material text. Next, state the question, issue or general problem that the student will examine in the final essay. Then, discuss how the student's research interest relates to other scholarship. Students should conclude their proposal by stating the significance of the topic. Lastly, student should list three scholarly works they plan to use in their final essay. Due at the beginning of class on Wednesday, February 13, 2019. Students will be asked to resubmit the assignment if it is done incorrectly.

Pop Quizzes: There will be between two and seven pop quizzes throughout the semester. The pop quizzes are intended to hold students accountable for each week's course work. The number and frequency of these quizzes will vary based on their weekly preparations for class.

Student-Led Group Presentation: The instructor will set aside time in class to distribute a sign-up sheet for students to select their groups and a day to present. The presentation will consist of 2-3 students per topic. Each group will need to supply the class with an in-depth summary (written document or oral overview) of the class reading. Then the group should pose analytical questions about the reading. Visuals are not required, but students can utilize them. Students should include an example of a cultural text that is exemplary of the class materials. Each group will be responsible for presenting to the class for 15-20 minutes. Students will be assessed according to the following guidelines: identifying the thesis, summarizing the reading, presentation skills, example of a cultural text and thought-provoking analytical questions. Students should meet outside of class to discuss the format of their discussion and questions. The groups can schedule an appointment with the instructor a week before they lead discussion.

Paper #1: Students are expected to select a cultural or material text (photograph, novel, film, song...) and introduce, contextualize, and analyze it. They will examine the cultural or material text closely and construct a well-written, thesis-driven, 4-page analysis related to race, riots, and rebellions. Students should perform their own, original reading of the cultural or material text, making a claim about what meanings one can extract from it. They are required to: describe the cultural or material text (be specific and describe it); make a claim (construct a thesis that makes a statement or claim about it); and support the claim with evidence. Students are not required to use outside secondary sources, but they can use the course readings to construct an argument. Refer to Chicago Manuel Style for proper citations. Paper #1 is due Wednesday, Mar 6, 2019. No Class, please submit papers to cicely.hunter@slu.edu by 4:00pm.

Final Essay: The final paper should hone in on a major theme of the course like race, culture, politics, riots, or rebellions. Each student will need his or her topic approved by the instructor. Further instructions will be given after mid-term week. The final exam is due on Friday, May 10, 2019, by 3:00p.m. by email: cicely.hunter@slu.edu.

Grading Procedures:

Laptops, Cell Phones, IPad, IPod, and Other Electronics: Students are not allowed to use electronic devices. Students must have devices silenced or turned off before class begins. Students must bring all readings to class.

Documented Disabilities

Students who may need academic accommodations due to a disability are encouraged to contact Disability Services (977-8885 or BSC 331). The instructor will gladly make appropriate accommodations for students who have been approved by Disability Services. And, of course, the instructor will handle such matters in strict confidence.

Required Field Trip

Students will be asked to take a field trip to the Library & Research Center Missouri Historical Society. The instructor will provide details about the trip closer to the date.

Academic Integrity

The University is a community of learning, whose effectiveness requires an environment of mutual trust and integrity, such as would be expected at a Jesuit, Catholic institution. As members of this community, students, faculty, and staff members share the responsibility to maintain this environment. Academic dishonesty violates it. Although not all forms of academic dishonesty can be listed here, it can be said in general that soliciting, receiving, or providing any unauthorized assistance in the completion of any work submitted toward academic credit is dishonest. It not only violates the mutual trust necessary between faculty and students but also undermines the validity of the University's evaluation of students and takes unfair advantage of fellow students. Further, it is the responsibility of any student who observes such dishonest conduct to call it to the attention of a faculty member or administrator. Examples of academic dishonesty would be copying from another student, copying from a book or class notes during a closed-book exam, submitting materials authored by or editorially revised by another person but presented as the student's own work, copying a passage or text directly from a published source without appropriately citing or recognizing that source, taking a test or doing an assignment or other academic work for another student, tampering with another student's work, securing or supplying in advance a copy of an examination without the knowledge or consent of the instructor, colluding with another student or students to engage in an act of academic dishonesty; and making unauthorized use of technological devices in the completion of assignments or exams. Where there is clear indication of such dishonesty, a faculty member or administrator has the responsibility to apply appropriate sanctions. Investigations of violations will be conducted in accord with standards and procedures of the school or college through which the course or research is offered. Recommendations of sanctions to be imposed will be made to the dean of the school or college in which the student is enrolled. Possible sanctions for a violation of academic integrity include, but are not limited to, disciplinary probation, suspension, and dismissal from the University.
