

DEGREE(S)

- + B.A. in Economics
- + B.S. in Economics
- + Minor in Economics

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Economics is recognized as the discipline that underlies all contemporary social sciences. Students who choose economics as their major will master the economic approach to decision-making, which is applicable to all professions and walks of life.

The B.S. in Economics includes a curriculum of business subjects such as accounting, finance, marketing, management and international business, and is designed for business students looking for a major oriented more toward the liberal arts.

The B.A. in Economics provides rigorous, analytical training in economics, while also incorporating a more traditional and broad-based liberal arts background.

After completing a set of core courses in economic thinking, students can choose to focus on area studies. For example, students interested in Latin America can simultaneously pursue the Ibero-American studies minor; students whose goal is to enter graduate programs combine the major in economics with a mathematics minor and/or focus on economic history and economic thought.
