SOAR COMMUNITY
RESOURCE GUIDE

a guide to Saint Louis University & college life with your student
Welcome to the Saint Louis University SOAR Program: Students' Opportunity for Achievement and Resources!

We're thrilled that you and your student have chosen SLU! We have assembled this guide to SOAR, SLU, and college to help you support your SLU student.

In this guide, we have information about the SOAR Program and how we support your student, information about campus resources, and a glossary all about SLU and commonly-used higher education terms and acronyms.

SOAR is invested in your student's success, and we're here to help. We hope you enjoy this guide to all things SLU and SOAR!
SOAR: Students' Opportunity for Achievement and Resources

About SOAR:

Before 2020, SOAR was a TRIO program, which is a collective of eight programs funded by the federal government (originally it was three programs, so the name: trio!). Our students were so successful at getting to graduation that the funding was revoked to be reallocated to other colleges with less successful graduation rates. Saint Louis University saw the benefits of the program and chose to make it a SLU-funded program that is permanent in the university and renamed the program: SOAR!

Brief History of TRIO:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1964</th>
<th>1965</th>
<th>1968</th>
<th>1986</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Economic Opportunity Act created Upward Bound to prepare high schoolers for college</td>
<td>The Higher Education Act created Talent Search to get high schoolers to graduation and college.</td>
<td>Student Support Services was created. “TRIO” became the name for all of these federal programs.</td>
<td>The Ronald E. McNair Postbaccalaureate Achievement Program was added.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TRIO programs are federally funded educational opportunity programs that serve students who are from low-income backgrounds, first-generation college students, and/or students with disabilities.
"The SOAR program has been kind enough to take me under its wing, allowing me not only the resources to enhance my academic schooling experience, but also the means to improve my education and understanding of the world...Thanks to the program, I've SOARed to new heights!"
-Jahmal Borden, SOAR student, Junior '22-23

All About SOAR

The SOAR program focuses on providing support for first-generation college students, students with disabilities, and students who receive Pell Grants. We provide support through several program components:

Individual, personalized advising
SOAR advisors meet with new advisees once a month during the semester, and meet with current advisees at least twice a semester. These advising sessions discuss classes, managing the workload, college life, and any other concerns or accomplishments that students want to discuss.

Programs, workshops, and community:
SOAR advisors and peer mentors offer programs, workshops, and community-building experiences throughout the semester! These programs are optional and focus on college life and study skills, financial literacy, and life after college.

First-generation students are students whose caregivers(s) did not receive a 4-year college degree

SOAR has students in every college on campus!
2021-2022 class:

- Arts and Sciences: 61
- Business: 15
- Engineering: 20
- Health Sciences: 29
- Nursing: 11
- Public Health and Social Justice: 19
- Deciding: 9
More SOAR Benefits & Resources

Standing Tutoring
Standing tutoring is a weekly tutoring appointment with Academic Support, during which the student works with the same tutor every session.

Early Registration
SOAR students get to register one day earlier than their same-year peers! This helps our students to get into the classes they need to graduate.

Mental Health Support
SOAR can refer students to psychological testing for mental health, which can help students to obtain academic accomodations and mental health care.

Free printing!
SOAR students can print for FREE at the computer lab in the SOAR office!

"The MOST important aspect about my relationships with my advisor is . . . "I am able to come with my questions and concerns knowing that I won't be judged or looked down upon. My SOAR advisor has truly changed my college experience for the better and I couldn't imagine SLU without them!"

Musa Ndhlovu

"...My parents immigrated from Cuba 26 years ago with my oldest brother and sister. So they were very new to the whole college experience. With SOAR I have been able to learn so much about future steps and ways I can shape my future. Just after ONE year I feel more confident and wiser than when I first came to SLU." - Vanessa Palmero
"Honesty. I am extremely grateful for my SOAR advisor. They have been willing to listen and give useful advice as I navigate my college experience. I know when I speak with my advisor, they have my best interests in mind and want to see me grow. They have also respectfully challenged my thoughts which has made me more thoughtful of the world we live in."
-Laura Gray

SOAR's expectations of students:

Meet with their advisor
At least twice per semester!

Communicate
The more we know, the better we can support the student.

Read their Email
That's where all of the information on SOAR and program offerings are sent!

Use their Resources
We expect students to take advantage of campus resources as appropriate. This can include cultural and educational programming provided by SOAR, gaining financial literacy, and working with SLU staff and faculty to succeed.

File a FAFSA
File a FAFSA every year. Families can file the FAFSA for the next school year starting October 1. SLU's FAFSA code is 002506 and SOAR is here to help with questions around filing your FAFSA.

What students can expect from SOAR:

We Work for the Students
We're dedicated to enhancing the students' SLU experience and preparing them for whatever comes next.

We Treat Students with Respect
We aim to create an inclusive community. Treating each individual with respect is key to that. We work to understand the different dimensions of each student and how to incorporate those pieces into our program and students' experiences.

We Recognize Students as Individuals
Every student is different and comes to us with a variety of questions, concerns and interests. We know that each student will have different needs and won't benefit from a cookie cutter approach. Our advisors meet with students individually to get to know them and how we can best help them achieve their goals.

We Respect Students' Privacy
While we cannot guarantee confidentiality, we can promise to limit the scope of sharing that occurs. Find more information on FERPA in the higher education glossary.

"My hope is that SOAR students feel a sense of holistic support from the program and that our program can serve as a comfortable space for students. We are here to help our students navigate through SLU, strengthen their sense of self, and achieve their goals."

"SOAR is not a place where we will simply tell you what to do, how to respond, what to think. We are here to work with you to help you find your own voice and build the confidence to navigate college the way you want. You're in the driver's seat. We're just happy to be invited along for the ride."

"As a SOAR student who is out-of-state and first-generation, SOAR became a sort of home for me. A place I felt heard, appreciated, and where I could go if I had worries or just general questions. I viewed it as a safe place filled with people who truly cared."
-Katie Velazquez
Most student appointments are made through an online service, EAB. Students can find EAB in MySLU and find their assigned support team to make appointments.

"The peer mentorship gave me a sense of relief and hope. My peer mentor was like a friend, willing to hear all my troubles and helped me navigate through them all without any judgement." - Catlin Clemons

SOAR students can encounter similar challenges when acclimating to college. Here are some common challenges that we hear from students:

Finding your community
All college students have challenges with fitting in and finding friends, and SOAR students might talk about experiencing imposter syndrome - feeling unsure if they fit into the college environment and fit in with their peers. Finding community with other students who have similar experiences, like their SOAR peers, can really help!

Building confidence at college
SOAR students have to get to know how college works! Our students are challenged to find and use campus resources, ask for help, and believe in their strengths.

Managing the workload
College is a different workload than high school, and that takes some adjustment! Managing homework and classes is just one part of being a student, too. Our students often have part-time jobs on and off-campus, do student clubs and extracurriculars, and try to stay connected to friends and family.

Self-discovery
A big part of college is learning who you are as a young adult. Students have to integrate their family and cultural values with their new experiences at college and the new knowledge that they gain. SOAR students can experience "breakaway guilt," which is guilt from leaving their families and home culture for college. Students may worry that they're leaving their families and culture behind.
There's a lot of ways you can support your SOAR student, from sending them a care package of their favorite things to giving them encouragement!

Encourage using campus resources and supports
There's a lot of help available for students on campus, and your student may need encouragement from you to take advantage of the help and support. SOAR advisors and peer mentors can help students to connect to more campus resources, too!

Encourage making connections
Students experiencing imposter syndrome or breakaway guilt might feel isolated, or that they're abandoning their family and home culture by making connections and friends. Encouragement from you can help your student to make friends and connections on campus. Encourage your students to join a student group, try new things with friends, and connect with campus staff and faculty.

Encourage self-discovery
Your student might be excited to bring home new ideas and knowledge! Encouraging their self-discovery and new ideas can help students to explore their coursework more deeply, make connections with other students and college staff and faculty, and become more confident as a young adult.

Encourage your student's strengths
College is challenging for all students. You probably know your student's strengths better than anyone - reminders of your student's strengths and encouragement can mean a lot to your student!
AAA - Asian American Association
The Asian American Association or AAA (pronounced "Triple A") unites SLU students of Asian and Pacific Islander American (APIA) heritage and non APIA heritage to educate others and ourselves about APIA culture, history, and current issues.

AAMS - African American Males Initiative
African American Males Initiative (pronounced "aims") is designed to provide programs, services, and experiences that will connect African American male students to university and community resources in an effort to facilitate their academic and personal success at Saint Louis University.

AMWA Undergraduate Student Division
American Medical Women's Association SLU Pre-Med. Women & femme people work alongside other students, physicians, scientists, and leaders in medicine to advocate for the needs and rights of women in healthcare and female patients.

AWM - Association for Women in Mathematics
The SLU Student Chapter of the Association of Women in Mathematics mentors and encourages women, girls, and other gender minorities as they consider and/or prepare for careers in the mathematical sciences.
