THE INSTITUTE FOR HEALING JUSTICE AND EQUITY PRESENT:

THE COLOR OF COVID

A webinar series to discuss the growing crisis and its impact on Black Americans.

APRIL 29, 2020
"STOPPING THE TREND"

MAY 5, 2020
"HEALING JUSTICE APPROACHES TO COMMUNITY AND SELF CARE"

3 EST/ 2 CST/ 12 PST

For questions, please contact Michelle Rolfsmeyer, Program Director at michelle.rolfsmeyer@slu.edu, or visit the IHJE website.
Stopping the Trend
facilitated by Keon Gilbert, Dr.PH, Co-founder of Institute for Healing Justice and Equity

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29

Black Americans are dying at higher rates compared to others diagnosed with COVID-19. This disparity points to systemic inequalities related to neighborhoods, housing, access and use of health care services, and the burden of chronic disease within Black communities. Scholars, activists and community leaders will discuss the existing inequalities contributing to long standing health inequities and their relationship to COVID-19 outline solutions and action steps that can be taken to stop the trend.

Panelists: Melody Goodman, NYU; Rayshawn J. Ray, David M. Rubenstein Fellow at The Brookings Institute and University of Maryland; Brian Smedley, American Psychological Association; Dr. Oliver Brooks, National Medical Association

Healing Justice
Approaches to Self and Community Care
facilitated by Kira Banks, PhD, Co-Founder of Institute for Healing Justice and Equity

TUESDAY, MAY 5

Healing justice is the practice of community and self-care that takes into consideration the stresses and trauma of oppression. COVID-19 has highlighted and exacerbated systemic inequities that disproportionately impact the lives of people of color, and this panel highlights practitioners who have taken innovative approaches to healing justice before and during the pandemic.

REGISTER HERE